AMA Presses Fight Against Truman Bill, Urges Dues

$25 Per Member Proposed; Leader Says Compromise Overture Rejected

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Three major steps to continue "an increasingly aggressive war" against what it terms "nationalization of medicine" were taken at the American Medical Association clinical session here yesterday.

The AMA board of trustees reported substantial progress in attacking the Truman Administration health program and sponsored several moves to cement the reported advantage.

1. The board recommended establishment for the first time of annual dues up to $25 a year to build a war chest. These dues would be mandatory. Failure to pay would result in loss of AMA membership.

2. President-Elect Elmer L. Henderson of Louisville, Ky., disclosed the selection by the board of trustees of a five-man committee to investigate medical care plans abroad. This follows departure last week of an Administration mission to Europe on a similar study.

3. Henderson said the board of trustees had rejected an "overture toward compromise" on the health program made by an unnamed group of Administration officials. Such an overture was denied by a top Federal Security Agency spokesman.

The fate of the dues proposal will be decided by the AMA house of delegates at a session in the Statler Hotel Thursday.

Membership Automatic

At present membership in AMA is automatic for physicians joining affiliated county or State medical associations. Expenses of AMA are met from AMA Journal profits, but this falls far short of meeting the two-million-dollar cost of this year's "education campaign" against the Government medical plan.

The special AMA $25 per member levy for the campaign brought in $2,250,000 from some 80 percent of the AMA's membership, Dr. Henderson reported. He is chairman of the coordinating committee in charge of the drive. Imposition of annual dues would result in 100 percent participation, association officials pointed out.

There are 145,000 members of the association. Last year's levy created a controversy, many members protesting the $25 assessment because they were out of sympathy with the uses to which the funds were to be put.

The five-man European study group will be headed by Dr. Walter E. Martin, Norfolk, Va., internist and member of the board of trustees, Dr. Henderson said.

The other four members will include specialists in surgery, pedi-

Lane Recalls Legislature On School Law

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 6 (Spec.).—Governor Lane today called the General Assembly to convene in special session December 17 to repass the 50-million-dollar school construction "credit pool" law that was invalidated by the court of appeals.

The bill originally was passed during the 1949 regular session of the Legislature. The Governor signed it.

It authorized a 50-million-dollar bond issue to help the counties finance construction of new schools.

Later it was found that, through a clerical error, there was no notation in the official Senate Journal of the bill's having passed.

This meant that the ambitious building plans of many counties would face a delay unless the Legislature met and went through the whole process of passing the bill once more.

Governor Lane said he was calling the special session for 11 a. m., December 17, "to avoid any delay in the progress of public school construction."

The special session, estimated to cost about $18,000, should "not entail lengthy deliberation," the Governor said. A spokesman said it will probably last "about an hour or two."

If the technical error is cor-

Small Business Asks U. S. Loan Insurance

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Commerce Department's Small Business Advisory Committee had its day on Capitol Hill yesterday. Its members, two dozen strong, gave a congressional subcommittee a three-point legislative prescription to help out the economic "little fellows."

Their recommendations:

1. An end to "double taxation" of earnings.

2. Permission for each businessman to specify his own rate of amortization for tax purposes.

3. Creation of a Federal loan insurance plan, patterned after that of the Federal Housing Administration, to insure banks against loss from loans to small business.

The small businessmen appeared in a prehearings session before a subcommittee of the Congressional Committee on the Economic Report. The subgroup is headed by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.). It will begin an inquiry today on the problem of investment of savings.

Would Reduce Revenue Loss

The appeal for a change in tax laws to end the double levy on business profits was made by Walter M. Bimson, a Phoenix (Ariz.) banker.

He argued that it was unfair to tax business earnings first by a levy on corporate profits, and second, by the personal income

Virginia Held Leading In Care of Alcoholics

Richmond, Va., Dec. 6 (AP).—Virginia has assumed "the medical leadership" in State treatment of alcoholics, Dr. Joseph Hirsh, of the National Research Council, New York, said here today.

Since the Virginia program was established in 1948, programs based upon the same principles have been adopted in the District of Columbia, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

4 Units Raise $45,063.15

New Pledges Push Chest Drive To Within 83.8 Percent of Goal

Four units reported new pledges of $45,063.15 at the twelfth report luncheon of the Community Chest Federation campaign yesterday, pushing the total contributions to $3,345,160—83.8 percent of the goal of $3,991,719.

Campaign Chairman Frank J. Luchs told workers at the Washington Hotel that they had raised $210,000 more this year than at the twelfth report luncheon last year, and from 42,000 more donors.

The Alexandria unit reported pledges of $3048 from 476 persons, to take the lead among the nine units with more than 95 percent of its quota already raised. Alexandria is only $3029 short of its goal.

Business I Unit reported pledges of $30,089 for a total of $1,193,776—more than 81 percent of its quota. It was the biggest unit contribution reported yesterday.

Business II reported 410 new gifts totaling $7009. The unit has now raised $187,064, or 77 percent of its quota.

Prince Georges County unit reported $4906 at yesterday's meeting. It's quota of $60,435 is now 57 percent raised.

The Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, Catholic University professor of philosophy, will address a general report luncheon at the Washington Hotel at 12:30 p. m. Thursday. More than 2000 invitations have been issued for this luncheon.

Work Beginning At White House

Temporary fences and four wooden sheds will begin to spring up on the White House south lawn today, first step in the $5,500,000 reconstruction job.

The renovation commission said John McShain, Inc., general contractor, will begin operations today. Underpinning work on the executive mansion will start early next week. About the same time dismantling of the interior also will start.

Peace in Kentucky

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

John L. Lewis made a small but undeniable dent in the solid opposition of the coal operators yesterday, when he signed a new work contract with an undisclosed number of independent companies.

The contract—believed to be the union's peace formula for the rest of the soft coal industry—gives the United Mine Workers three new major benefits.

1. A 15-cents-a-ton hike in welfare fund royalties, to a total of 35 cents per ton.

2. A 90-cents-a-day raise in pay, for a regular day's pay of $15.

3. Complete control over the welfare fund.

Withholds Firms' Names

In announcing the first batch of new agreements, Lewis withheld the names of the companies and the number involved, but he revealed that the contract-signing operators produced 2,333,800 tons of coal a year, or less than 1 percent of the bituminous coal industry's annual output. Union sources indicated the companies accepting the new agreement were small and medium sized independents in Kentucky and West Virginia.

Lewis' announcement stated that the additional contract benefits, effective January 1, 1950, would increase the cost of mining the soft coal in the Appalachian area by 23 cents a ton, but substantially less in the modern mechanized mines and stripping operations.

During the past months in which the UMW has been negotiating with the major groups of coal operators, John L. has stated that additional cost of new union demands would amount to 30 to 35 cents a ton. Lewis has further declared that the operators could absorb these additional costs without passing them on to the consumer.

"Able and Willing" Clause

Earlier UMW demands called for a shorter working day, but the contracts signed yesterday left working hours unchanged. The Lewis announcement also indicated that the new contract retains the "willing and able" clause by which Lewis legally can call out the miners for any reason whatever. Many of the large coal operators have been insisting that this clause be eliminated in any new work agreement.

Companies signing the new agreement were given immediate approval by Lewis for operating on a five-day week. As of last Monday, John L. ordered all his 420,000 miners, in the anthracite as well as the soft coal fields, to work but three days a week, until their employers sign a new "improved"

Youth Slain Mysteriously; Cash Intact

WINSTON CLARK CLAY, JR.

An 18-year-old filling station attendant was found mysteriously shot to death yesterday in Berwyn, Md.

The youth, Winston Clark Clay, jr., of Wells pky. and Colesville rd., College Park, had been shot twice in the left chest.

The son of a College Park real estate broker, Clay was graduated from Hyattsville High School in June, 1948, and had planned to enter the University of Maryland in February.

His body was discovered shortly after 12:30 p. m., sprawled in the lavatory of the Kirwan Sunoco Station at 8616 Baltimore blvd.

Robbery, police said, appeared the most likely motive, and they flashed an Eastern seaboard lookout for two white men and a Negro seen near the filling station yesterday morning.

County police also disclosed that they were looking for a fourth man—"a likely suspect"—but asked that no details about him be published as not to hinder in the arrest.

However, they admitted bafflement at finding $78 untouched in the victim's wallet and $20 intact in the coin changer he wore at his belt.

At about 12:30 p. m. a woman whose identity was not disclosed by police drove into another Kirwan station, at 8325 Baltimore blvd., three blocks south of the one in which Clay worked.

"Something's wrong at your other station," she announced.

One of Clay's closest friends has been Jerry Springman, 20, of Greenbelt, an attendant at the second Kirwan filling station.

Springman went to the station where Clay was the lone attendant.

He tried the door of the station. It was locked. Springman climbed in through a window.

"He was sitting," said Springman later, "with his back against the corner of the toilet near the door, which was ajar. His head was bent forward. His hands were folded on his lap, his feet sprawled in front of him.

"I shook him and tried to wake him up, because I thought he had passed out. I tried calling his name, but then I noticed the color

U. S. Protest On Blockade Is Rejected

Hongkong, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The Chinese Nationalist government today rejected a strong United States protest against the shelling of American merchant vessels which try to run its blockade of Chinese Communist ports.

Nationalist Foreign Minister George Yeh announced the rejection to American Charge D'Affaires Robert Strong here.

Yeh warned that American blockade runners—specifically the ships of the Isbrandtsen Lines of New York—must suffer the consequences if they try to evade blockading Nationalist warships.

The Isbrandtsen ships, he said, will have "rough going" in any future attempts to run the blockade.

It is understood Yeh told Strong the Nationalist government could not accept the interpretation of any foreign government in its decision to keep closed the ports occupied by the Communists.

The State Department in Washington announced Saturday it had warned the Nationalists to stop attacks on blockade-running ships "immediately."

Yeh said the Sir John Franklin—the shelling of which was the immediate cause of the State Department protest—would be permitted to leave Communist-held Shanghai, where it now lies.

Chinese Reds Told War Is Near End

Hongkong, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Communist President Mao Tse-tung told his army of four million men today the war in China is practically ended.

He said the soldiers will be asked to turn their efforts to agriculture and industry, but he did not mention demobilization.

The Communist leader said the protracted war had wrought "serious calamities to the people and serious destruction to the country's economy—we must heal the scars and embark on economic, cultural and construction work as well as guard the nation's defense."

Mao's statement was broadcast by the Peiping radio as the Nationalist government was reported in heading flight from its temporary capital of Chengtu.

West German Peace Treaty Being Studied

NYHT News Service

The United States, Great Britain and France have taken a first cautious step toward final termination of the state of war with western Germany, it was learned yesterday.

Under a secret agreement reached at Paris last month by Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, the three powers plan to consult sometime after the first of the year on desirability of the action.

Termination of the state of war would give the West German Federal Republic full status as a nation, but would destroy legal basis for the presence of western occupation troops. Consultations, it was learned, will begin among legal experts of the three governments. They will consider, among other things, ways by which American, British and French troops can be retained in their present advance positions against the Soviet Union.

Preparing for the talks, officers of the State Department and the British and French Foreign Offices have been instructed to prepare individual briefs on reasons for and against declaring peace with Western Germany. When the consultation stage is reached, the plan calls for inclusion of Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and other western nations which were at war with Germany.

The State Department believes that Russia is preparing to conclude a separate peace treaty with the Communist East German Republic and to withdraw Red army troops within a year thereafter. But the Big Three procedure, according to information available here, implies no hurry by the western powers. The intention, diplomatic sources said, is to explore legal questions, and to prepare the way for action when it becomes advisable.

Russians Got Radar By Ruse, Jordan Says

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—A wartime expediter of United States lend-lease supplies to Russia said today the Soviets obtained top secret American radar equipment by a ruse as well as the atomic materials he had discussed previously.

George Racey Jordan, former Air Force major, asserted the Russians managed to get a plane with the equipment to their country after he had balked them by ripping the radar out of four other aircraft.

Jordan, who has stoked the fires of a new congressional probe into vital military materials allegedly sent to Russia in the war, held a news conference here to discuss his role further.

The radar apparatus was the only item he added to his previous list of secret material which he has charged went to the Soviet Union.

However, he said the equipment was so important that Gen. H. H. Arnold, wartime head of the Army Air Force, "would just as soon have given away his right arm as the radar."

In a broadcast tonight, Edward R. Murrow, Columbia Broadcasting System commentator, referred to Jordan's story of how he ripped the radar out of the C-47. Murrow added:

"Incidentally, there were no C-47s equipped with radar at that time."

Later, CBS said its news department had obtained this information from "authoritative sources."

Jordan refused to add anything to his statement of last Friday and yesterday about uranium and other materials used in making atom bombs which he said went to Russia through the Great Falls, Mont., air base. Jordan was an expediter at the base.

He said that Chairman John Wood (D., Ga.) of the House Committee on Un-American Activities had asked him not to reveal the names of the mysterious "Mr. X"

Men Will Be Set Free at Boundary, Radio Says

Officials Will Be Released at Border; Ward Believed on Way From Mukden

By the United Press

The Communist-controlled government of North Korea yesterday offered to release two captive American officials as Angus Ward and his party presumably began their arduous exit from Communist China.

Government officials said the offer to release the two Americans, Albert Willis of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Alfred T. Meschter of Kinderhook, N. Y., was announced by the North Korean radio today.

The broadcast said the two men Marshall Plan officials who have been held since September 22 would be freed at the dividing line between North and South Korea next Sunday morning at 11 a. m. (10 p. m., EST, Saturday).

There was one condition: The broadcast specified that a representative of the American Embassy in Seoul, the South Korean capital, must be at the station of Yohyon on the thirty-eighth parallel with full "power of attorney" to receive the two men.

Seized During Mutiny

Willis and Meschter were seized after the crew of a South Korean freighter mutinied and fled with them to Communist-ruled North Korea.

The broadcast asked the Seoul Embassy to confirm the arrangements by announcing their acceptance over Radio Seoul.

Word that the two men will be freed came after the State Department appealed to Russia to intervene.

The department, meanwhile, assumed that Ward and his party have begun their long train ride through Communist China to a waiting American ship and freedom.

The last word the department had from the bearded United States consul-general was that he and his staff—20 persons in all—would leave Mukden, Manchuria, at 2:47 p. m. (Eastern Standard Time) yesterday.

The group was due to board a special train furnished by the Communists in a last-minute surprise gesture of courtesy after they had held Ward, his wife and his employes under "house arrest" for a year.

To Fly From Japan

There may be no direct word from Ward and his party until they reach Tientsin. The trip is expected to take about two days. From Tientsin the American ship is expected to take them to Japan whence they will fly to the United States.

Communist decisions to free the Ward group and the Korean captives came after a mounting wave of public American indignation at the forced detention of U. S. citi-

Do-Drop-Inn Loses Bills to Burglars Who Do

Burglars took the cafe's name too literally early yesterday and stole $26 from the Do-Drop-Inn, 200 H st. nw., James R. Haggins, owner of the establishment, told police.

Haggins said $23 of the loot was tucked away in an iron pot hidden under the kitchen stove. A $1 bill and a $2 bill, good luck souvenirs tacked on the wall, also were missing.

Haggins said he hid the $23—the day's receipts—because the Do-Drop-Inn has been burglarized "eight or 10 times" in the last five years.

Haggins said the souvenir bills are autographed by him and a friend named simply, "Napoleon."

'Outsiders' Are Denied Access To Loyalty Board Case Files

(Maryland Court Hears Ober Law Appeal. Page 11)

By Chalmers Roberts
Post Reporter

Intervention of a Senator and a Representative in a Government employe loyalty case has led the Loyalty Review Board to issue an order forbidding any person connected with the program to discuss any case with outsiders.

This was disclosed yesterday by Seth W. Richardson, chairman of the Review Board. He said the Senator telephoned him shortly before the last session of Congress ended, asking to bring the House member along for a "conference" about a Government worker whose case was under consideration.

Richardson said he turned the Senator down flatly, whereupon the Senator wrote to the Cabinet member in whose department the employe worked. When the official said he would give "consideration" to the Senator's views, the Senator demanded and got an interview with the Cabinet member.

Following this, Richardson said, the Review Board was called together and passed the hands-off resolution. Richardson said he was sure Cabinet members and departmental loyalty boards were happy to receive such "protection" from congressional pressure.

(Government workers go through three steps in loyalty cases: (1) before a board in their own department or agency (2) before the department or agency head, including Cabinet members, if they appeal and finally (3) again on appeal before the Loyalty Review Board.)

Richardson did not identify the Senator or Representative or the Government department in which the employe worked. He told the story to reporters following a luncheon speech at the Mayflower Hotel before the Washington Civitan Club.

Richardson also said:

1. An FBI suggestion that the Review Board handle security cases as well as loyalty cases involving Government workers had been rejected.

2. Eleanor Roosevelt recently wrote him suggesting that dismissals from the Government service be made on grounds of security rather than loyalty. Richardson said he already had considered that idea but that his board had no power to make the policy change.

3. The FBI has agents planted in numerous subversive groups around the Nation, gathering information on loyalty as well as other matters.

4. If Canada had had a loyalty check program similar to this country's, a "great many" of those called before the royal commission there never would have became involved in subversive activities.

The loyalty official said his review board has "gone around behind the barn to lean over backwards" in cases of suspect employes.

He said he was shocked recently to learn the Government has an annual turnover of some 500,000 employes, thus indicating the loyalty program is likely to continue indefinitely as far as new employe are concerned. He said the loyalty check now is down to the last 100 cases among regular Government workers.

Rep. Brown Assails Census Plan

Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R., Ohio) yesterday accused the Administration of turning the impending 1950 population census "into a super-snooping invasion of the people's sacred right of privacy."

He referred to the Census Bureau's recent announcement that, in taking the census next year, it will ask every fifth person how much his total income was in 1949.

Brown said in a prepared statement that the bureau has no authority to ask such questions.

Hike in Officers' Living Costs Proposed by Budget Director

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Payments for meals and lodging made by thousands of officers of the armed forces would be increased under an economy proposal made by Budget Director Frank Pace.

A two-fold plan advanced by the Bureau of the Budget, The Washington Post learns, would raise living costs for most junior officers and many seniors by:

1. Requiring all officers to pay a minimum mess bill of $54 a month, or $1.80 a day. Unlike enlisted men, who are fed by the Government, officers must pay for their meals. Now, however, they pay only the actual cost of the food—normally $30 to $40 a month.

Under the Pace proposal, they would also pay for the cost of preparation and serving, use of Government stoves, lighting, etc.

(2) Bar any enlisted men from working as cooks, stewards, waiters or cleaners in officers' messes or quarters ashore.

The latter not only would hit top-ranking generals and admirals occupying Government quarters, but also unmarried younger officers living in bachelor officer quarters and married officers occupying similar quarters while on temporary assignments.

Volunteer enlisted men are as-

Doctors Get Chance to See Cleanest Hair

By John London
Post Reporter

Physicians from all over the country and their guests are currently offered the opportunity of viewing the girl with the cleanest hair in Washington, and maybe in the world.

In a series of repeat performances, a lush brunette roposes in bed—publicly, right there in the National Guard Armory—and gets her hair cleansed and then dried in a large helmet-shaped gadget.

The girl and gadget constitute one of the 140-odd commercial exhibits accompanying the 70 scientific displays staged for the third clinical session of the American Medical Association. She is demonstrating beauty in a hospital bed.

The vast Armory floor is crammed with displays of an electric knife that cauterizes as it cuts (they're using steak for a substitute subject); a lovely miss strapped into the new portable iron lung; other young lovelies exhibiting the latest in drugs and pills, cigarettes, soft drinks and medical tomes; and scores of graphic displays on the treatment of diseases.

One-Legged Skater

Among the more dramatic shows is one staged with local medical students acting as patients while doctors display the correct treatment of fractures, actually putting casts in the "victims."

Then there is the man who goes scooting around on skates, nimbly executing pirouettes and figure eights and threes. He's got an artificial left leg and he's indicating how successful rehabilitation of amputees can be.

One of the more popular displays reveals the mechanical devices dreamed up by quacks to "cure" everything from bad breath to cancer.

For example, a blue and white little dumbbell bar. This panacea "expands the hydrogen atoms of your being." Sealed inside the device is a plastic cup half-filled with water "no different from that in Lake Michigan."

ical quackery include:

An aluminum helmet which emits rays "guaranteed" to grow hair on the baldest head. The source of the therapeutic rays: a seven-watt bulb painted red.

A gold-framed bit of wire mesh which comes encased in an exquisite gold-embossed leather box. The mesh, which "rejuvenates your endocrine glands" and aids whatever else ails you, should be worn in a little white silk bag next to the body. If you wear it long enough it may cause burns resulting in cancer—it's dangerously radioactive.

Then there is a beautiful console style contraption resembling a television set. A dozen dials and red and green lights as well as impressive looking indicators not only diagnose but positively cure all maladies, so the advertisement for the apparatus says.

Dr. Henderson denied any relation between the AMA study and one now being made by Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing and four aides in six European countries.

Dr. Henderson

The first suggestion that any compromises to bridge the wide gap between the AMA and the Administration on health insurance was made by Dr. Ernest E. Irons of Chicago, AMA president, in the opening talk to the association's house of delegates session at the Statler.

He disclosed that letters had been received suggesting that the medical profession discuss a possible compromise. He added that "the doors of the American Medical Association are open at all times for conference."

"However, we cannot compromise on fundamental principles of freedom for American medicine and for the American people," Dr. Irons emphasized.

Dr. Irons' statement did not square with a later one by Dr. Henderson. The latter declared the overtures toward compromise had been rejected. "We're not out for any compromise," Dr. Henderson emphasized. He declined to identify any of the Administration spokesmen he said sought to discuss a comprosise.

Acting FSA Administrator John Thurston, when asked about Dr. Henderson's statement, declared simply, "It sounds like wishful thinking." The Committee for the Nation's Health, prominent group campaigning for the program, said such a suggestion by the Administration was "extremely unlikely."

A compromise proposal is expected today from Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.), who indicated dissatisfaction with the Administration health bill earlier. He has called a press conference for 3 p. m. today to discuss his plan.

AMA members were called on by Dr. Henderson to check the position of political candidates on the health issue. "Every doctor, in his own community, if he believes in sound medical practice—and if he believes in maintaining American freedom—not only has the right to support candidates who square with his convictions, he has a sacred obligation to do so," he said.

The President-elect praised the work of Whitaker & Baxter, Chicago publicity firm, conducting the national educational campaign.

During the all-day session of the House of Delegates, several dozen resolutions were introduced and referred to committees for study before final action Thursday.

'Coke' Helps in Child Flu, Doctor Says

A popular soda fountain syrup (Coca-Cola) can eliminate epidemic vomiting in children, the professor of pediatrics at the University of Maryland told assembled doctors here yesterday.

"Epidemic vomiting," he explained, is that autumn malady which sweeps through children and adults as well, and is loosely called "intestinal flu" and even "Virus X."

Since the initial finding some 18 months ago, said Dr. J. Edmund Bradley of Baltimore, a modified syrup has been used which does not have the stimulating effect of the beverage but gives the same soothing results.

Dr. Bradley made his report to a pediatrics session of the annual Clinical Session of the American Medical Association, at the National Guard Armory here.

Dr. Bradley said he became interested in trying out the beverage syrup after a study of the physiological aspects of "so-called intestinal influenza." The studies, he said, showed that the vomiting patients showed a low degree of stomach acidity and a high release of sugar in the urine.

Since the fountain syrup was high in both acidity and carbohydrates and possessed other properties which aid the body's conversion of sugar to energy, he said, it appeared that it would help the patient.

It did, he reported.

Children fed the pure fountain syrup in teaspoon doses stopped their vomiting, sometimes within a few hours, even though "epidemic vomiting" generally runs a 24-hour to a five-day course, he told the doctors.

Neither the modified product nor the Coca Cola syrup appears to have any toxic effect on children, he said.

"However," he said, "even in the midst of epidemic vomiting, a vomiting child may not have the 'flu' but may be suffering an intestinal block or even appendicitis, where delay in prompt medical attention might be costly."

Dr. Bradley said that since initial use of the modified syrup for epidemic vomiting the syrup has been tried out effectively to stop regurgitation in infants, the parent-frightening but seldom harmful "burping" of food.

Besides Dr. Bradley, the special studies were carried on by his associates and assistants, Dr. Robert Oster, University of Maryland professor of physiology; Dr. Roderick Shipley, associate professor of physiology, and Mrs. Leah Proutt, assistant in physiology.

2 Medical Television Steps Taken Here

It's Official

AMA Chooses Dr. Fishbein's Successor

Dr. Morris Fishbein, Mr. American Medical Association to America for the past 37 years, was retired officially yesterday as editor of the AMA Journal.

The AMA Board of Trustees said the retirement was by mutual agreement and would provide "adequate lifetime remuneration" for Dr. Fishbein, who has accepted a position with a medical publishing firm.

The board named Dr. Fishbein's understudy as his successor. He is Dr. Austin Smith, who has also been director of therapy and research and secretary of the council on pharmacy and chemistry of the AMA.

The board's statement praising Dr. Fishbein as an "editorial genius" went without applause in the AMA House of Delegates session. Dr. Fishbein has been at odds with some AMA leaders for his outspoken blasts. Last June he was ordered not to discuss controversial subjects.

Dr. Smith will be succeeded in his pharmacy and chemistry post by Dr. Robert T. Stormont of 7116 Harwick rd., Wood Acres, Md. He is medical director of the Federal Food and Drug Administration.

By James E. Hague
Post Reporter

Two big steps forward in medical television were taken here yesterday at the third annual clinical session of the American Medical Association.

1. At Gallinger Hospital, a final rehearsal was staged successfully for a surgical television demonstration today using equipment in which the camera is actually located in the center of the operating room light, long sought as the ideal fixture.

2. From Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, color television was brought by micro-wave directly to receiving sets in the Armory in the first intercity color telecast in the history of surgical procedures.

The Gallinger development is considered important because of the automatic coordination of lights and television camera has been a major problem. Under this system, the surgeon will move the light to give him the greatest illumination at the operating site and the television lens will always be aimed at the proper spot. It is in black and white.

A symposium from Gallinger on streptomycin in tuberculosis was televised to the Armory yesterday and the first operations under the camera will be seen between 10 and 12 noon today by Drs. Theodore Beattie and Kaden Tierney, both of George Washington University.

When television was first used successfully as an adjunct of surgical teaching in February, 1947, it was immediately envisioned not only as perhaps the best method of teaching surgery to medical students but also as a possible way of taking the latest surgical techniques into the view of practitioners all over the country.

The telecasts to the Armory yesterday proved that much of the distance between the practitioner and the medical center has been bridged in less than three years.

The first experiments with television, at Hopkins in 1947, were in black and white and transmitted by cable to receiving sets within the hospital. A few months later, black and white was sent by a special beam from New York hospital to a gathering of doctors at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel there.

Color At Philadelphia

Provision of the color which is essential to proper demonstration of surgery came earlier this year at Philadelphia.

The first color television, as in the case of black and white, was transmitted from the operating room to a medical meeting in the same city. It was recognized as far superior to black and white.

The next step, microwaving the color image from city to city, was arranged as one of the features of the AMA session here and the first operation was televised from Hopkins yesterday.

The initial operation was the famous "blue baby" technique developed by Dr. Alfred Blalock and Dr. Helen B. Taussig in Baltimore and performed yesterday by Dr. H. William Scott, jr. The identical procedure was chosen as the first operation in the original television experiment.

The color method (the CBS system of mixing colors through spinning discs) permitted the demonstration of the finest tissues. Thus, the delicate stitching of one blood vessel to another in the "blue baby" was clearly perceptible. The end of one blood vessel, about the diameter of a cigarette and about the consistency of half-cooked macaroni, was stitched to a hole of the same size cut in another vessel. The surgical aim is to increase the blood flow to the lungs of the blue baby.

Immediately after the T-junction was completed, the thrill of the blood coursing through the arteries could be seen.

Step by step, the surgeon explained his operation through a button microphone in the mask over his face.

Removal of a cancer mass in an armpit, of a portion of a stomach and of an eye cataract (an opaque lens) were the other surgical procedures televised yesterday.

Go-Slow Signal Flashed on Use Of Cold Pills

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Public warning against general use of the new anticold pills, and scientific praise for many old cough remedies, were voiced separately here yesterday.

The go-slow signal on use of antihistamine pills for colds was given by Dr. Austin Smith of Chicago, in his first press interview as new editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Praise for chest rubs, lamp treatments, paregorics and even brandy and whisky for relief of coughs came later, at the National Guard Armory, in a report of two Milwaukee specialists on coughing complaints.

Both the medical editor and the medical specialists spoke at meetings here of the current annual Clinical Session of the American Medical Association. Dr. Smith was interviewed at the Statler Hotel, where AMA business sessions are conducted, and the Milwaukee physicians gave their scientific findings at a session on chest diseases at the National Guard Armory.

Dr. Smith told reporters that medical science has yet to determine the "harmful effects" the new "cold cures" have on the body or its organs.

But this much is known, he said: the antihistamines do cause drowsiness which can be dangerous in driving an automobile or in working around machinery; the antihistamines can cause "disorientation," the feeling of light-headedness or insecurity, and they at times cause nausea.

As to possible benefits of the new pills, he said, they may relieve those symptoms which are similar to distresses of the common colds—if the symptoms are due to allergies.

"But," declared Dr. Smith, "I do not think that many symptoms of the common cold are due to allergies."

Dr. Smith said he had little respect, either, for cold vaccines.

Old-time cough remedies were given scientific validity at the Armory sessions by Drs. Leon H. Hirsh and Andrew L. Banyai, attending physician and clinical director, respectively, of the Muirdale (Tuberculosis) Sanitarium, in Milwaukee. They reported their findings on "Useful and Useless Coughs."

"We found out," declared Dr. Hirsh, "that a number of old-fashioned remedies which doctors have discarded are really worthwhile."

Among these, he listed expectorants containing paregoric, which increase bronchial secretions to add liquid to the secretions which need to be coughed out. Even better, though no one knows why, he said, is paregoric which has "aged" on the doctor's shelf for several years.

Other favored cough relief measures which doctors have from time to time derided and which the two investigators yesterday reported as valid were heat to the chest wall, camphor linaments, oil of wintergreen and the mustard plaster, as well as "whisky or brandy, but in medicinal doses."

Illinois Doctor, 84, Father of Area Man, Named Year's AMA General Practitioner

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

An 84-year-old Illinois "country doctor" whose career, for romance and ruggedness, might have been put together in Hollywood, yesterday was named the Nation's "general practitioner of the year."

The honor was awarded by the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association meeting here, to Dr. Andy Hall, who is still delivering babies and putting in a full work-day in Mount Vernon, Ill., and who last week walked 8 miles to shoot quail. He is father of an Arlington military physician.

For a full-sized "country doctor" character, how is this?

Paid in Spuds

"Doctor Andy" has practiced nearly 60 years in Mount Vernon and the surrounding farm country, beginning in the days when he made calls on horseback and got perhaps a bushel of potatoes for delivering a baby, a half-hog for curing a pneumonia case.

After getting "little encouragement from my fellow physicians," he got started as a young doctor in Mount Vernon by telling them:

"'I don't expect you to send me any of your good paying patients, but if you have any deadbeats and scalawags, let me have them and maybe I can build up a practice.' They did, too, and so I got experience I needed badly and a little income, and finally a practice."

Made Calls Walking

Once, unable to get transportation, he walked 40 miles one winter day seeing different farmer paients.

As late as ten years ago, when he was 75, he took a train to see a patient 12 miles out in the country. It was zero weather. Missing the last freight train back, he walked 12 miles—in four hours—down the track and back to Mount Vernon.

His three sons are all doctors. One is associated with him in Mount Vernon. Another lives at 1213 N. Evergreen st., Arlington, Va.: Col. Wilford F. Hall, chief flight surgeon for Military Air Transport Service.

Doctor Andy's first education was in a one-room log schoolhouse.

His first office was a two-room affair which cost him $5 a month. He slept there, too, unable to afford a rooming house.

Today citizens of the 12,000-population town of Mount Vernon describe him: "No activity is undertaken in the community without his advice and guidance. He is the elder statesman to whom all problems are brought for solution."

Disarmed Thug

To round off the picture of Dr. Andy, there is this incident:

In 1913, looking from his office one day he saw a holdup man back out of the bank across the street, "his pockets full of cash and a pistol in his hand." Borrowing a gun from the dentist next door, Dr. Andry cranked up his car, chased the robber to the outskirts of town, where he disarmed and held him until the sheriff arrived.

Dr. Andy has thick grayish hair, tanned face and looks 20 years younger than 84. Yesterday, with photographers' bulbs flashing like fireworks 18 inches from his face, he conducted a press conference with a zip and flourish that kept a dozen reporters hustling to keep up.

He was asked the secret of longevity.

Partly heredity, he answered—his father lived a month short of 99, his mother to 88. Otherwise: "Regular habits. I always went to bed around 9, up at 6. Never ate too much. Never chew or smoke. Occasional beer, but never drank any whisky of any consequence—most I ever had was when I was 10 years old and had the measles. They used to think that would cure them—corn whisky, that is."

The doctor's career in Mount Vernon has been interrupted by service in the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection and World War I.

When World War II came he was near 80 and thinking of loosening the rein a bit. But when the younger men went into the service the care of the Mount Vernon sick fell on his shoulders and those of a few other men. Younger men succumbed to the strain—he carried on without faltering.

It was said of him: "He never refused a night call—or asked if the patient had funds."

Bids Rejected As 'Twin' Meters Are Proposed

District Commissioners yesterday rejected all bids for supplying 750 parking meters because the low bidder proposed to put in unorthodox "twin" meters.

George E. Keneipp, Director of Vehicles and Traffic, raised the point that twin meters—placed between two parking spaces to control parking at both—might confuse drivers. And if one were broken, he said, the city would lose revenue from two spaces instead of one.

The District Contract Board ruled, however, that the low bidder, International Meters, Inc., had met the specifications. So, instead of awarding the contract to the next low bidder, the Commissioners ordered the specifications be rewritten to exclude twin meters.

NAM Board Asks Revised Excise Tax

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—A uniform manufacturers' excise tax on all end products was proposed tonight by the directors of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Food and food products would be exempt from the new levy, which the NAM proposed as a substitute for all retail and miscellaneous excises, excepting those on liquor and tobacco. The latter would be left unchanged.

There was no mention of a specific rate in terms of percent or dollars and cents.

But the directors said the rate should be "sufficient to produce the same amount of revenue—four billion dollars in round figures—as is now produced by the excises for which it would substitute."

Three thousand big and little businessmen received the NAM directors' report as they swarmed into town for the fifty-fourth annual congress of American industry.

The early arriving delegates were greeted at the Waldorf-Astoria meeting with a cheering forecaste from one of the NAM directors.

C. A. Putnam of Keene, N. H., a State director for six years, said the consensus of the early birds was that business will continue at the present high level at least through the first half of 1950.

There were such familiar proposals as substantial reductions in the individual income tax; elimination of double taxation of corporate income; a Federal budget ceiling for the fiscal year 1951 not in excess of $33,600,000,000, and basis control by Congress over Federal expenditures.

The directors urged a return of the United States to a gold standard for its currency. They reaffirmed support of the European Recovery Program and opposition to cartels, either private or governmental.

The directors expressed "unqualified opposition" to the Brannan plan for pricing agricultural products.

And, they added: "Industry is opposed to the creation of any additional valley authorities."

The NAM board said "All sizes of business units have their place in the economy, and size as such is not a criterion of monopoly or lack of competition."

Low Air Fare To Europe Seen for '50

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Reporter

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday invited scheduled and non-scheduled air carriers alike to apply for special charter permits to handle an expected record volume of travel to Europe next summer.

Member Harold A. Jones dissented from the board's decision, and an official of Trans World Airline announced his company would oppose the decision to the limit.

Air lines this year have flown across the ocean some 240,000 persons—just about equal to the entire 1940 population of Wyoming or Delaware.

But 1950, for several reasons, is expected to set a new record, 50 or even 100 percent larger than this year.

The CAB invited the carriers to ask permits for group charter operations between next June 1 and September 30. Such charter trips may call for special fares, at half the usual rate in some instances.

Jones, in his dissent, described the majority decision as "uneconomic and of doubtful legality."

Jones was particularly concerned with an apparent reversal of the board's policy against low-rate summer "tourist" fares. The board opposed such plans in a letter to United States airlines participating in a rate conference at Mexico City last month. Instead, the board said it favored a 7-percent increase in the basic fare, which now is $350 one-way to London.

Nonscheduled or irregular air carriers—those not having permits for timetable operations—at present are forbidden to carry passengers to Europe except with special permission of the board.

30,000 Under Red Banners Occupy Big Italian Estates

Rome, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Police riot squads were called out today to disperse Communist-led peasants staging protest "occupations" of large private estates throughout Italy. Fifty-two arrests were reported.

The squatters, marching under Red banners and flags, demanded immediate action on the government's long-promised land reform program. An estimated 30,000 demonstrated in the rich Latium zone around Rome, and in southern Italy and Sardinia.

Police said they were unable to control all the land squatting because the groups "move into a sector of land for an hour and then leave when the police come. When the police leave, they return. There are not enough police to stop all the constant movement of the peasants."

An estimated 10,000 peasants—supported by several hundred industrial workers, took part in the generally peaceful maneuvers around Rome. Some 15,000 demonstrated in the Calabrian zone of southern Italy and 5000 squatted in Sardinia.

Six persons have been killed in clashes with police during similar demonstrations in southern Italy in the past month.

The situation was another major headache for the government, already plagued by a 48-hour strike of 400,000 semi-state employes and the scheduled 24-hour walkout of 1,200,000 civil servants on Saturday.

Murders, Holdups, Suicides On Television Are Protested

A group of Californians protested to the Federal Communications Commission yesterday against what they believe is an undue amount of violent crime in television programs.

The group, known as the Southern California Association for Better Radio and Television, sent the FCC copies of letters of protest previously mailed to six Los Angeles television stations.

They did not ask the FCC to take any specific action but pointed out that children are avid television fans. They said the following list of crimes was noted on one week's programs over the stations:

"Ninety-one murders, seven stage holdups, three kidnapings, 10 thefts, four burglaries, two cases of arson, two jail breaks, one murder by explosion, two suicides, and one case of blackmail.

"Cases of assault and battery—two numerous to tabulate. Also cases of attempted murder. Much of action takes place in saloons. Brawls too numerous to mention, also drunkenness, crooked judges, crooked sheriffs, crooked juries."

Also cited was one psychological drama the group said was "so terrible" that the member assigned to watch the program had to switch it off.

36 Fleeing From Franco Land in British Guiana

Georgetown, British Guiana, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Thirty-six Spaniards who said they were fleeing the severity of the Franco regime arrived today aboard the sloop Pepita after a 32-day crossing of the Atlantic during which they ran out of food and water. They said they came from the Canary Islands.

They said they had subsisted the last 10 days on cornmeal mixed with salt water.

of his face and knew something was wrong."

Clay's wounds were not readily apparent. When the Branchville rescue squad arrived at 12:38 p. m., it was thought he had been felled by carbon monoxide fumes. Artificial respiration was tried.

However, when State Trooper E. E. Hudgins arrived a few minutes later, he lifted Clay's dark blue working blouse and undershirt and found the two bullet holes above the heart, about five inches apart.

An investigator said one slug pierced Clay's heart. The second entered higher in the chest, ranged downward and lodged near the ribs, indicating that Clay might have been sitting down when he was shot.

Clay was pronounced officially dead when Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner, arrived about 1:30 p. m.

County Detective Richard A. Pearson said there were no marks to indicate a scuffle had taken place, but there was some reason to believe Clay had been robbed.

He said the youth was known to have been paid more than $100 Monday, but the detective had not been able to learn whether he had any of this money with him when he left his home at 6:45 a. m. yesterday for work.

In addition, Pearson said, the youth had been given a "bank" of $70 when he started his day's work and presumably had made some sales before he was murdered.

Had a holdup killer stolen Clay's $70 "bank" and the cash he had taken in from sales, but overlooked the $78 in cash, possibly Clay's own, in a wallet?

Or did the $78 represent the $70 "bank" and $8 in sales? And was no money taken?

The slant of the police investigation hinged largely on the answers to those questions.

His "steady girl," Carol Day, 15, a student at Greenbelt High School, slaid Clay "didn't have an enemy in the world." They were out on a date Monday night, she said, and drove around Greenbelt and Beltsville.

Pearson said Clay was last seen by a woman who lives near the filling station.

She said she passed the station on her return about 11:30 a. m. but saw nothing.

Men Seen at Station

However, a few minutes later, she recalled, she looked from a window of her home and saw a man running from the filling station.

Police said another witness, a man whom they did not identify, related that he saw two white men walking away from the station with rapid strides at about 11:30 a. m. The two men piled into an old model black coupe and drove off rapidly toward Washington.

Four Winners Named In Essay Contest

Four winners in an essay contest sponsored by the Catholic Institute of Catholic University on the subject, "The Most Striking Personality I Have Known," were announced last night by Rev. Fr. Sebastian, O. F. M. Cap., institute director.

The awards, presented at Carroll Hall, 924 G st. nw., went to Richard Zabel, first prize; Mrs. Mary Quigley, second prize, and Eva Sherwood and Leonard Stanford, third prize.

AAA to Push For Parking Lot Liability Law

The Washington advisory board of the American Automobile Association yesterday agreed to push for legislation next year requiring full liability and financial responsibility for operators of District parking lots and garages.

Richard W. Tupper, associate director of public relations for the AAA, asked the local group to adopt this as one of five objectives to become a part of its next year's program.

Among these are a careful study of automobile financing to determine abuses; formation of a committee to study Washington's place in a national highway system; encouragement of operation of self service gasoline stations; and a system of education on use of harmful anti-freeze solutions. The board heard Tupper's suggestions at a luncheon meeting at the Mayflower Hotel.

Science Produces Busier, Gentler Test Tube Bees

Hamilton, Ill., Dec. 6 (U.P.).—Scientists have produced a busier bee by artificial insemination of queen bees, Geneticist G. H. Gale, jr., reported today.

Gale said the "test tube bee babies" grew up to be healthier, gentler, more industrious bees. They scurry more rapidly from one flower to the next to gather nectar and, as a result, produce more honey.

"They still have their stingers," he said, "but they're not so quick on the draw with them. They're much better behaved."

The busier bee was the result of research begun in 1935 to develop a type of bee resistant to American foul brood disease, which was decimating swarms, he said.

American Proposal On China Approved

Lake Success, Dec. 6 (AP).—An American-backed declaration for the world to keep hands off China and let the Chinese settle their own troubles was approved tonight by the U.N. Political Committee. The Chinese Nationalist delegation bitterly opposed it.

The vote was 43 to 5. The negative votes were cast by the Slav group. The Russian bloc had declined to debate the Chinese question but voted on the various proposals.

The committee approved by a narrow margin a Chinese-accepted proposal by Cuba, Ecuador and Peru to put the whole question before the year-around Little Assembly for further study and for a report to the 1950 General Assembly. The vote here was 23 to 19, with 14 abstentions. The United States voted against this proposal which fell far short of the two-thirds majority support it normally would need for final approval in the Assembly.

The Assembly is expected to take up the committee decision Wednesday at Flushing Meadows, where it is trying to clear its slate and adjourn by this weekend.

Dr. T. F. Tsiang, Chinese Nationalist delegate who charges the Soviet Union with helping the Chinese Reds, said he was deeply disappointed at the United States vote against the Latin American three-power resolution. He said if that resolution had failed it would have meant the Assembly would pass in silence his serious charges against the Soviet Union.

"There are those who say China is dead," Tsiang said. "Free China is not dead. It is unthinkable that this assembly should pronounce not only China dead but the case of China dead. If that is the case we might as well close our doors."

zens. They climaxed an increasing campaign by the State Department to bring the moral pressure of world opinion to the rescue of the captive Americans.

United States officials now are expected to concentrate their efforts on seeking the freedom of William C. Smith of Long Beach, Calif., and Elmer C. Bender of Cincinnati and Chicago. These two Navy fliers have been held in Red China since their plane was forced down on a routine training flight more than 13 months ago.

Willis and Meschter had been serving as advisers aboard the United States merchant ship on loan to the South Korean republic by the Economic Cooperation Administration when they were seized. The United States recognizes the South Korean regime as the only legitimate government in Korea.

Accused of Serving on Warship

The broadcast from North Korea, which is under Communist domination, said the two ECA men had been serving on a "war vessel belonging to the South Korean government."

American officials had understood Willis and Meschter were being held at Chinnampo, on the west coast of North Korea, and had recently requested food and clothing from South Korea.

Repeated United States protests to the North Korean government produced no results, and the State Department then sent two formal notes to Russia asking her aid in getting the men freed. More recently the United States Ambassador in Moscow, Alan G. Kirk, took up the case personally with Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Yesterday's broadcast was a sharp reversal of the tone of the only previous North Korea announcement on November 15. At that time the Communist regime indicated the United States would have to deal with North Korea if it wanted the men freed.

The railway station of Yohyon is on the 38th parallel dividing North and South Korea near Kaesong, 40 miles northwest of Seoul.

Film Projectionist Dies, 'Leaves Them Laughing'

Greenville, Pa., Dec. 6 (AP).—Movie projectionist Max Sutton, 53, got his machine in the Jordan Theater ready to show the film, "Always Leave Them Laughing."

The show went on and the audience howled with laughter. They were unaware Sutton had collapsed and died of a heart attack.

was not enough to meet expenses.

"This is the enormous difficulty confronting us today," he said.

Only Sunday Radio Peiping indicated the Communist regime's budget had a huge deficit which will be covered by floating victory bonds.

Reports from Canton today said Communist city officials had asked businessmen for a "voluntary loan" of $1,500,000 (U. S.) to be raised by December 17.

Reporting the mass flight from Chengtu, the Central News Agency said evacuation planes "one after another" were flying to Hainan Island for the second straight day.

The agency said the Nationalists, "mobile cabinet" under Chiang Kai-shek, who apparently has taken over the presidency again, still was in Chengtu.

Red reinforcements which raced north from Pichien in Kweichow Province joined one of the columns that captured Chungking—then turned west—at Tzekung, 75 air miles southeast of Chengtu.

Other Communist columns rolled unopposed into Nanning, capital of the southern Kwangsi Province.

Britain Presses U. S. To Recognize China Reds

London, Dec. 6.—The British

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—The British to recognize Communist China at the same time Britain does.

An informed source said there was some difference of opinion between the two nations on what diplomatic recognition meant.

Britain has decided on recognition of the new Peiping government "for practical reasons," he said. She holds that such recognition does not mean approval either of the Communist regime or its policies.

Adenauer Called Up On Rearming Issues

Time Runs Short

Austria Talks Stall on New Red Demand

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Chances for conclusion of an Austrian independence treaty this year faded still more today. Western powers charged yesterday the chances were "road-blocked" by Russia.

"Strictly no progress" was reported after today's two-hour meeting of Big Four foreign ministers' deputies who have been trying for more than two years to complete the treaty.

Western sources said Western deputies failed to budge Soviet Deputy Georgi Zarubin from a new position—that he can make no further commitments on the draft treaty's last five articles until Russia and Austria agree on Russian claims for supplies furnished since liberation.

Russia Bills Austria For Supplies, Services

Vienna, Dec. 6 (AP).—Russia has presented the Austrian government with a bill for all supplies and services furnished this country since the end of the war, informed sources said today.

It is believed here that until an agreement is reached, Russia will probably stall any action on the Austrian treaty by the Foreign Ministers' Deputies in New York.

Western sources said most of the claims are ridiculous.

The Russians are demanding payment for all construction and repair work furnished by their forces since 1945.

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 6 (U.P.).—The high commissioners of the Western allies will meet west German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer Thursday to thresh out the issue of German rearmament, it was disclosed tonight.

The allied commissioners may also question Adenauer about an ambitious plan of the west German states to form a powerful police force.

American High Commissioner John J. McCloy received an overall directive on German policy from Washington today.

Adenauer raised the hot-potato rearmament question in an interview in which he said he would be willing to see all-German units incorporated in a Western international army "if the Allies insist."

Francois Andre-Poncet, the French high commissioner, is virtually certain to rebuke Adenauer for his statement. Exceedingly well-informed sources said McCloy also was "irritated."

The commissioners also intend to bring up the reported four-point plan of the Germans to build a strong police force.

It is reported that the plan is sponsored by the interior ministers of the 11 West German states. It is reported that the plan calls for:

1. Establishment of 11 "strong" police forces in the German states. The Allies have forbidden any central police force but have permitted state police.

2. The setting up of a rotation system under which at any given time 10 percent of the state policemen would be assigned to a barracks for "special training."

3. Arming the police units with small arms sufficient to meet "any requirements" that might arise.

4. Starting training courses on "tactical" police problems.

The Allies understand that the German interior ministers plan to discuss this program at a secret meeting to be held later this week

$30 Million Due on Shipping

Seven Marshall Plan nations may have to pay the United States 30 million dollars for failure to ship at least one half their recovery goods in United States vessels, it was disclosed yesterday.

The nations are Britain, Denmark, Sweden, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and Ireland.

The penalty has been levied by the Economic Cooperation Administration under the European recovery law, which requires that one half the Marshall Plan shipments be transported in United States vessels. ECA officials declined comment but it was learned that about 150,000 tons of shipping last April, May and June is involved.

The recovery nations met the requirement on bulk and tanker shipments

Britain Seeks Economic Union

London, Dec. 6 (AP).—A proposal that Britain and three Scandinavian countries join in an "economic union" was advanced by Britain today.

Official sources said the United Kingdom sent notes to Sweden, Denmark and Norway suggesting a four-power conference on the plan.

The union would be known as "Uniscan" (for United Kingdom and Scandinavia.) In it, one country's currency could be changed more easily into another's; trade would be freer, and capital and labor could be moved more freely in the area.

Unofficial reaction reported from Scandinavian capitals appeared favorable.

ECA Administrator Paul G. Hoffman's repeated calls for merging together the economies of western European countries, now kept apart by restrictions on trade and currency convertibility.

Informed sources here said an economic union with Scandinavia was much more to Britain's advantage than similar arrangements with other west European nations.

The Scandinavian nations produce many of the things Britain needs most, such as wood pulp, eggs and bacon.

To some extent, Uniscan would link up the economies of not only Scandinavia and Britain, but also of the sterling area, which includes Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, Pakistan, Ceylong, Burma, Iraq and Iceland.

World Court Handed S. African Problem

New York, Dec. 6 (NYHT).—Faced with persisting South African refusal to submit the former Southwest Africa mandate territory to United Nations trusteeship, the United Nations General Assembly voted 40-to-7 today to ask for an International Court of Justice advisory opinion on the area's legal status.

Meantime, the Assembly again asked South Africa to send in reports on the affairs of the territory's 375,000 people—90 percent of them primitive tribesmen.

For the fourth year, it renewed its appeal that South Africa submit a trusteeship pact for the area, which is the only League of Nations mandate without either freedom or United Nations trust status.

South Africa, after submitting one report which received scathing criticism from the United Nations Trusteeship Council, has refused to send in any more data, although promising to administer the region in the mandate spirit and to refrain from annexation.

Ambassador G. P. Jooste of South Africa, told the Assembly his country did not recognize any "accountability" to the U. N. for its rule.

He declared the trusteeship committee had violated South African sovereignty by having allowed the Rev. Michael Scott, South African clergyman, to deliver an oral criticism of South African policies. He said this precedent would yet haunt other member nations.

Citizens Plead That Policeman Be Kept on Force

A group of 66 District citizens yesterday asked the Commissioners not to fire Pvt. Ellsworth Williams, veteran policeman who pleaded guilty last week to being drunk off duty.

Their petition stated that during his 18 years duty at the Thirteenth Precinct Williams "worked hard to better the condition of this city" and that seven years ago he had been stabbed in the performance of his duty. They asked he be restored to duty or retired.

Williams, 55, has been recommended for dismissal by the Police Trial Board. Its report has not yet reached the Commissioners. A policeman for 25 years, he is now attached to the Eleventh Precinct.

Yugoslavia Appoints Bebler Its Permanent U. N. Delegate

Belgrade, Dec. 6 (NYHT)—Deputy Foreign Minister Ales Bebler has been appointed permanent Yugoslav delegate to the United Nations in place of Dr. Joza Cilfan, who has been made a deputy foreign minister.

Bebler

Bebler will represent Yugoslavia in the Security Council, to which Yugoslavia was elected in October with the backing of the United States.

He has been on Yugoslav delegations to the U. N. since the first General Assembly, held at London in 1946.

Firebrand Bebler Among Closest to Tito

Bebler is said to be one of the few persons in Yugoslavia who can get to see Marshal Tito on a half hour's notice.

Before the break with the Cominform he was a firebrand at United Nations Assemblies and other international conferences. He outdid the Russians themselves in his invective and vituperation against the Western powers.

Lately he has tempered his tirades, as if he and his government were anxious not to annoy the West unnecessarily.

He has more influence than power within the inner circle of the Tito dictatorship. He is believed to be a co-author, with Vice Premier Edvard Kaardelj, of the notes Tito has been sending to the Cominform.

Americans who know him say Bebler has a quick and agile mind, and knows his way with foreigners better than anyone in the Tito regime. His father was a Swiss engineer who moved to Trieste, then a part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, and married a local girl of an Italian family.

Bebler is a skilled debater who probably will be less at home in the Security Council, with its ponderous procedure, than in the rough-and tumble of U. N. Assembly sessions.

Czech Book Lays Treason To Archbishop

Prague, Dec. 6 (U.P.)—The Czech Communists today accused Archbishop Josef Beran and other Catholic leaders of "high treason," denouncing Beran as "the most guilty because we had faith in him."

The charges were issued in a book, "The Conspiracy Against the Republic," reviewed lengthily by the official army newspaper, Obrana Lidu. The volume apparently had the government's official approval.

It followed a church warning that the Catholic bishops would defy the new church control laws, and that the government had pushed the country toward the brink of a religious war.

The book, which the newspaper urged its readers to obtain, attacked the Vatican and the United States.

"Criminal police of the Vatican . . . are driving the bishops into treason against their government," it said.

It said that "the American imperialists, who took over the role of the defeated Nazis" against communism, supported the Vatican. The book added:

"And the church aristocracy headed by the Prague Archbishop Beran was willing to perform high treason. Beran is the most guilty because we had faith in him . . . He suffered in a German concentration camp."

Ober Law Appeal Heard by Court

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 6 (AP).—Lawyers for and against Maryland's Ober law banning antisubversive activities today argued for five hours about whether a lower court ruling that the law is unconstitutional should be upheld.

Foes of the controversial act accused its defenders of seeking a court opinion to swing voters to their side on a referendum.

Frank B. Ober, Baltimore lawyer who headed a commission which drafted the measure, said an opposing attorney, I. Duke Avnet, and others already had used propaganda to cloud the commission's objectives.

Chief Judge Ogle Marbury of Maryland's high court interrupted Avnet's final attack to comment:

"This court is not going to decide this case to please anyone."

Assails Attorney General

Avnet assailed Attorney General Hall Hammond for questioning whether the 10 Marylanders who brought suit against the act would be directly affected by its enforcement. Hammond broached the subject "at least by inference," Avnet said.

"Interest" of parties to a suit determines whether their case warrants a decision on the constitutionality of a law.

The complainants were upheld when Circuit Judge Joseph Sherbow of Baltimore ruled the law invalid. They include six professors, two doctors, a salesman and a sculptor.

Besides creating a Special Assistant Attorney General to ferret out subversives, the law would require loyalty oaths or checks of State employes and school teachers. It also would provide prison terms up to 20 years for working to overthrow the Government by force.

"Mr. Hammond did not fare so well in the court below and as an afterthought raises here the question" of the complainants' interest, Avnet said.

Referendum Won

He contended Ober "wants you to hold there are no parties of interest, but also to influence the vote in a referendum by saying Judge Sherbow was wrong and sections of this act are constitutional."

Before Sherbow handed down his decisions, a "Citizens Committee" against the act had filed enough petitions to force it to a referendum in the 1950 elections. In his ruling Sherbow also tossed out an amendment giving the act "emergency" status. Otherwise, if constitutional, it could have remained in effect until after the vote.

Ober joined Hammond and Deputy Attorney General J. Edgar Harvey in the State's appeal.

"Are they to be allowed to vote on this statute and what it means or an improper interpretation?" Ober asked.

Opponents "very carefully selected" statements by "people who have the pre-Pearl Harbor complex, people who say it can't happen here," Ober said.

"Those dear Quaker ladies were fooled, not by a statute they read, but what was said about it." He referred to three Baltimore Quaker women who declined for religious reasons to sign loyalty oaths prescribed by the act.

Studied Decisions

Ober said his commission sought out Supreme Court decisions and laws of other States in preparing the Maryland bill. The result was a plan for proper exercise of a State's "duty to help the Federal Government in the maintenance of internal security," he said.

Early in the oral arguments, Attorney Linwood G. Koger lost an attempt to show it was "based on hysteria."

"We haven't anything to do with hysteria," Judge Marbury replied. He said the courts must stick to constitutional questions.

Cuba-Miami Alien Ring Is Smashed

By The Associated Press

Attorney General McGrath announced yesterday that Federal agents have seized operators of an elusive Havana-to-Miami air shuttle who allegedly smuggled aliens into this country at $500 to $800 a head.

Several of the aliens apparently came from behind the Soviet Iron Curtain, the announcement said.

Authorities here and in Miami said the two alleged ring leaders and their wives were arrested in the Florida "gold coast" city Monday after a long vigil by immigration agents.

McGrath reported that Justice Department operatives are now rounding up 26 aliens illegally slipped in through the Miami gateway from Cuba since September. Three have already been picked up in New York City.

The Attorney General named Gaylord Saxton, 26, a former Michigan State College student, and Charles Cramton, 26, both of Grand Rapids, Mich., as operators of the illegal air transit service.

They were taken into custody in a Miami rooming house and charged with alien smuggling.

Immigration border patrolmen also arrested the two men's wives, booked as Mary Jean Saxton and Ruth Lucille Cramton, and charged them with aiding their husbands.

ANPA Assails New Telegraph Rate Regulations Before FCC

By The Associated Press

Maj. Gen. Julius Ochs Adler, vice president and general manager of the New York Times, yesterday urged the Federal Communications Commission to "minimize the harmful effects" of new international telegraph regulations.

Adler is chairman of the press communications committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. His statement was presented to the FCC by Cranston Williams, ANPA general manager.

The committee head said his group was "greatly disturbed by the threat to world-wide freedom of information inherent in the regulations dealing with press communications adopted last summer by the international telegraph conference in Paris."

Noting the adoption of a proposal fixing a minimum of 10 words for press telegrams, Adler assailed a "regulation whereby press rates are to be fixed arbitrarily and without any consideration of economic or other factors, at one third of the full commercial rate." He said the press rate from China to the United States would jump by 120 percent.

The ANPA committee chairman asked the FCC to "advise all signatories to the Paris telegraph regulations that the American carriers will not be forced to nor asked to abide by the regulations governing press communications" adopted by the conference.

Key Figures Heard On Atom Shipment

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Staff investigators of a second congressional committee, the Joint Atomic Energy group, yesterday contacted key witnesses on "every aspect" of alleged wartime atomic shipments to Russia.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), chairman of the joint congressional committee, said Lieut. Gen. Leslie Groves, former head of the famed Manhattan project, already had been interviewed and there would be "no letup" in the inquiry.

Groves meanwhile was slated to tell the House Committee on Un-American Activities today what he thinks of the authenticity of the story told by George Racey Jordan, former Air Force major and liaison for Russian purchasing agents in 1943-44.

Refuses to Name 'X' and 'Y'

The House group refused to divulge the names of "Mr. X" and "Mr. Y," two officials of the Roosevelt Administration who Jordan said were involved along with the late Harry Hopkins in "suitcase" documents flown to Russia over the Alaskan route, but said Jordan was perfectly free to disclose them.

Representative Morgan M. Moulder (D., Mo.), acting chairman of the committee, flatly denied Jordan's statement in New York yesterday that the committee asked him not to reveal the names.

"He's using the committee as an excuse," Moulder told newsmen. "We gave Major Jordan no such instructions or advice. The committee has no control of that sort over a witness."

Moulder said he knew of no committee plans to call Henry Wallace. Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis jr., who first broadcast Jordan's story Friday, charged Monday night that it was Wallace who "ordered the atomic materials sent to Russia" over Groves' objections.

In New York Wallace said in a statement that "I must request that I meet them and their unnamed Government informants face to face before your committee. Let the session be open. I would also suggest you call Milo Perkins and any other former member of the Board of Economic Warfare whom you and Mr. Perkins think should come."

May Be Called Yet

Another committee source said Wallace still may be called if investigators uncover evidence linking him with the present case. Wallace termed the charges the "sheerest fabrication."

But former Representative John McDowell (R., Pa.), erstwhile member of the House committee, said in Pittsburgh that Wallace was the "chief figure" identified as arranging atomic shipments to Russia during committee hearings a year ago.

Jordan was questioned about Wallace during closed-session testimony before the House committee Monday, it was learned.

He was asked if he was sure the initials appearing on a "suitcase" note were "H. H." and not "H. W." Jordan said he was positive the initials were "H. H." because Harry Hopkins' full name also appeared on the printed stationery.

[The New York Herald Tribune said the White House reported that White House stationery bears only the printed caption, "The White House" with "Washington" underneath. Not even the President's name appears on the stationery, it said.—Editor's note.]

Claims Suitcase Search

Jordan claims to have found the "H. H." note in one of the many rope-tied, cheap, black patent-leather suitcases he said he searched over Russian protests at a Great Falls, Mont., airfield in early 1944.

It read: "Had a hell of a time getting these away from Groves." Jordan said he was also personally ordered by Hopkins over the telephone to speed a load of atomic materials to Russia.

Senate Atomic Chairman McMahon, who last Saturday ordered a joint committee staff inquiry into the Jordan story, meanwhile spent the day conferring with members of the armed forces and his investigating staff.

McMahon said the committee's quiet checking of Jordan's story is "proceeding satisfactorily, and there will be no letup in the investigation until every aspect of it has been completed and thoroughly explored."

He said "the transcendant importance of the atomic energy situation, with all of its national and international implications," demands careful procedure.

In addition to the interview with Groves, McMahon said his staff investigators are contacting Jordan "and a great many other people."

He said the House group's investigation had not made "any difference" in the conduct of his own.

"I want our committee to have all of the available facts before we take any action," McMahon said.

and "Mr. Y" drawn into the atomic shipments investigation.

These are two officials of the Administration of the late President Roosevelt who allegedly have been connected with the shipments.

The former Air Force major said he first spotted the radar in a C-47 scheduled to be turned over to the Russians. The equipment was new to him, he said, and he made a phone call about it to his superior officer, a Colonel Gitzinger, at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio.

"Good God," Jordan said Gitzinger exclaimed. "Don't tell me they got radar equipment. Rip it out."

The former expediter said he tore the apparatus out of the C-47 and three other planes.

But a fifth plane with similar equipment and carrying Maj. Gen. A. I. Velyaev, chief of the Russian purchasing mission, took off from Washington, by-passed Great Falls, and made it to the Soviet Union, Jordan said. It did so by dumping at the end of the Washington runway all baggage and unnecessary equipment, Jordan said.

Asked how he knew of this flight, he said it was reported in newspaper stories and pictures.

Jordan first told his story about the atomic shipments publicly on a broadcast of Fulton Lewis, jr., news commentator, last Friday.

"The very moment he (Lewis) took a look at the files," the former major said, "he called the FBI and from that moment they had charge of them."

Jordan said the atomic shipments went to Russia with the aid of the late Harry Hopkins, close adviser to President Roosevelt.

Hopkins has been defended by many of his friends. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said Jordan's charges were "outrageous."

Hans A. Bethe, a Cornell University professor, said at Ithaca, N. Y., that "atom bomb materials" could not have been shipped to Russia in 1943 because the United States did not possess them "in any significant quantity."

Bethe was chief of the division of theoretical physics at Los Alamos, N. Mex., in the war.

The scientist said "the public can properly demand" that Louis J. Russell, senior investigator of the Committee on Un-American Activities, and Jordan "specify what materials and what quantities of these they allege to have been shipped to the Russians."

"Until this is done," he continued, "the allegation will appear spurious to anyone who knows the history of our production of fissionable materials during the war."

In Cincinnati, Lieut. Col. J. D. McFarland, former engineering officer for the Alaskan Division, Air Transport Command, defended Jordan.

McFarland expressed the belief the one-time expediter "can substantiate everything he's said, adding that Jordan "raised considerable hell" over shipments of uninspected cargoes to Russia.

Lewis said in a broadcast last night that former Vice President Henry A. Wallace helped to get the atomic materials shipped to Russia. Wallace said this was "sheerest fabrication."

Yugoslav Spy Trial Verdict Due Friday

Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, Dec. 6 (U.P.). The first espionage trial involving Russians ever to be held in another Communist state ended tonight. The Yugoslav prosecutor did not ask the death penalty for any of the 10 defendants.

In his summation, 27-year-old Enver Krzic described the Soviet Union as the real culprit. He repeatedly attacked Soviet Embassy officials for blackmailing their nationals into spying. He did not even demand the maximum prison sentence.

Krzic asked the court to be lenient with the four youngest defendants. He made no recommendation for four of the older defendants, including one woman, after noting that they had confessed in full.

But he asked heavy sentences for Father Alexie Krisko, 54, the Russian Orthodox priest, and Arsen Boremovic, 55, lawyer-judge, who pleaded only "partly guilty."

The court president announced the verdicts will be handed down at 10 a. m. (4 a. m. EST) Friday.

Kostov Treason Trial Opens Today in Sofia

Sofia, Bulgaria, Dec. 6 (AP).—The treason trial of Traicho Kostov, former Communist deputy premier, will open Wednesday, an official statement said tonight.

Kostov was formally charged six days ago with treason, spying and sabotage. He has been under arrest since April, when he was purged from his deputy premiership and the Bulgarian Politburo.

AEC Asks U. S. Help To End Plant Strike

Oak Ridge, Tenn., Dec. 6 (AP).—The Atomic Energy Commission put in a call for Federal help today to end a wildcat walkout that has idled some 2000 construction workers on AEC projects here.

The unexplained walkout began quietly yesterday when 250 workers on the 66 million-dollar gaseous diffusion plant (K-29) left their jobs. The number of idle spiraled today.

The AEC appealed to the National Labor Relations Board and the U. S. Conciliation Service. It sought to put a quick end to the delay in work on the high-priority K-29 plant and other installations.

Officials on Way

R. W. Cook, manager of Oak Ridge operations of the AEC, said two NLRB officials were en route here by plane.

Gordon Molesworth, assistant to the AEC manager, said the walkout involves about 2000 construction employes but does not include any workers producing fissionable materials.

He said all construction crafts except carpenters and laborers are involved and that the AEC has received no officials word of the cause.

Molesworth said he understood workers walked out in protest against use of nonunion labor by the Oman Construction Co. of Nashville, which is building a gas pipeline.

All the workmen, Molesworth added, are members of the Knoxville Trades and Labor Council (AFL). Spokesmen for the council had no comment.

The Oman Co. said it employed both union and nonunion workers.

Fear of Strike, Not Spies Cause VE Ban, AEC Says

Fear of a Communist-inspired work stoppage, rather than fear of spying, led the Atomic Energy Commission to cancel recognition of the United Electrical Workers at two atomic energy projects.

Such was the gist of the testimony of Oscar S. Smith, chief of AEC's labor relations branch, before the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday. At the direction of the AEC, General

Boskey Smith

Electric refused to recognize the union as the bargaining agent for employes at two GE laboratories last year.

AEC's method of dealing with the United Electrical Workers, ousted last month from the CIO because of pro-Communist policies, prompted a committee member to praise the atom agency, which in recent months has been often criticized on Capitol Hill for alleged laxity in matters of security.

Representative Morgan M. Moulder (D., Mo.) said there wasn't the slightest doubt among committee members about the "effective and efficient manner in which the commission has protected the national security."

tax applied to the dividends that a shareholder receives.

The subcommittee counsel, David Scoll, pointed out that the loss of revenue to the Government ensuing from the proposed change would be about one billion dollars. Bimson said that a higher level of investment, and hence of higher business activity, might make up part of the gap.

Ross Stewart of Houston, Tex., argued that a much larger capital investment would be made by small businessmen if depreciation charges could be speeded up.

Speaking for the advisory committee, he urged that the law permit each businessman to determine for himself the number of years during which he would charge off, as depreciation, the cost of new equipment and plant.

Treasury Has Opposed

The proposal has been opposed by the Treasury Department when it has been offered in the past.

The objection is not so much to any loss in tax revenue—in the long run, the tax return might be about the same regardless of the period allowed for amortization—but rather because it makes difficult any specific year.

The loan insurance plan, submitted by Bimson and Committee Chairman Harry L. Miller of Chester, Pa., foresees a Government agency as administrator.

Private banks would make loans to small businesses, charging in addition to interest an insurance premium of about 1½ percent. This sum would be enough, it was felt, to provide insurance against losses.

Miller said the Government agency chosen to administer the loan plan should not have the power to review the loan before it is made.

"The bankers must have the sole right to make any loan he wishes to make," he added, "so long as it meets certain simple qualifications set forth in the law."

Miller said that FHA Title I loans are being made at the rate of 50 million dollars a month. Last year, he added, the average loss on all these loans was about 0.3 of 1 percent of the principal.

contract. The new agreement is to run until Sept. 1, 1951.

Lewis' statement said that "additional coal companies will execute the agreement as convenience permits." This was a reference to tentative agreements worked out with other independent operators in Indiana, and around Pittsburgh.

Terms of the new contract give Lewis complete control over the welfare fund set up for the miners o fthe contract-signing employers, through the appointment of Lewis himself, and Josephine Roche as members of the three-member board of trustees, Miss Roche is listed in the UMW announcement as president of the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co., of Denver, Colo. The company is inactive in the production of coal. Miss Roche, a long-time friend of Lewis, has been administrative director of the welfare fund operated under the old, industry-wide contract which expired last July 1, and whose benefits were suspended on September 16 for the lack of funds.

The third trustee of the fund under the new contract is listed as Howard W. Showalter, president, Monongahela Rail and River Corp., Fairmont, W. Va.

Under terms of the old contract, there was a union trustee for the fund, an employer trustee, and a neutral trustee. Of late, the neutral trustee, Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), who used to vote regularly on the side of John L., has been voting against Lewis.

Earlier in the day, the National Coal Association declared that "no responsible coal operators in the bituminous industry are carrying on any wage negotiations with Lewis . . . The union's fishing expedition for suckers in the form of small strip operators who can only exist in times of stress is no answer to the present intolerable situation and is misleading. There is no such thing as collective bargaining; it is merely sign a Lewis-dictated contract and take the consequences."

signed to work at the quarters of top "brass" on the theory recognized by Congress that ranking officials are expected to entertain and the large Government quarters maintained for them require considerable help to keep up.

Regulations ban enlisted men from assignment as servants at the private quarters of any but specified high-ranking officers. The rules and practices differ in the various services, but volunteer enlisted men also generally maintain and operate the "BOQs" and messes.

Should civilians be hired to replace the latter, the cost would come out of the officers' pockets.

A ranking official at the Pentagon said last night that the Pace proposals would be thoroughly studied before any action is taken. Legislation probably would be necessary to put them into effect.

Other officials expressed doubt that the plan would be adopted in toto, though of the opinion that some changes in the system may result.

The Doctors' Dilemma

It is obvious that the topic of paramount public interest in the discussions of the House of Delegates of the American Medical Association, which convened here yesterday, will be the much-vexed questions of compulsory health insurance and socialized medicine. It would, however, be a great pity if this question were permitted to obscure the scientific program, which promises to be of great importance, especially in the matter of cancer research, yet this seems likely to be the case.

Dr. Elmer L. Henderson, who is soon to take over the presidency of the association, has admitted that Washington was chosen as the site for this meeting largely for the purpose of impressing the Administration with the determination of the doctors to continue their fight against the proposed health program. About a year ago the association voted to spend some millions of dollars upon an "educational campaign"; but thus far the doctors themselves have not proposed any practicable alternative to President Truman's impracticable plan. If they have been able to devise one, it will undoubtedly be disclosed in the course of the meeting.

Meanwhile attacks on the intransigeance of the association's attitude have been increasing. An example is the series of two articles by Prof. Milton Mayer, the second of which appears in the current issue of Harper's Magazine. Insisting that health insurance is one thing and socialized medicine another, Professor Mayer concludes that if socialized medicine is to be avoided, members of the association must yield a good many more of their present privileges than they have yet shown any disposition to yield. It is time, he thinks, that the doctors realized that their present attitude will not—> save them from the clamor of millions of people for a new equity in society, for [quite literally] a new lease on life. The medical insurance bills made further progress in Congress each time they were buried under A. M. A. pressure, furthest of all in the last session when no fewer than 17 alternatives to the Truman program went into the hopper. The members of the profession will either accept the fact that the twentieth century is here . . . or lose their freedom fighting for their freebooting. If socialized medicine . . . is ever fastened upon this country, the American Medical Association will call government insurance the American way. But it will be, for the last time, too late.

Stubborn Trade Facts

State Department officials were reported last week to be planning an educational campaign to convince Congress and the public that the United States must increase its imports if foreign aid is not to be indefinitely prolonged. At the same time Senators Young of North Dakota and McCarthy of Wisconsin expressed indignation because ECA officials had urged several butter-producing countries to increase their exports to this country in accord with the tariff agreements made at Geneva and Annecy. They gave high praise to the Department of Agriculture for blocking such shipments and declared that ECA policies might wreck our program for supporting butter prices.

We might as well face facts. The United States is committed to a foreign policy whose success undoubtedly depends upon our willingness as a creditor nation to expand imports. At the same time we are committed to an agricultural price-support system that practically closes our markets to many commodities which are in surplus supply in this country because of that policy. Certainly it does not make sense to encourage other nations to ship butter to a country whose government is holding off the market 100 million pounds of butter in order to maintain prices at present high levels. The more butter we import, the more butter the CCC will have to buy to prevent prices from slipping. And there are many other commodities in surplus supply as a result of price supports—cotton, wheat, a 10 years' supply of dried eggs, and so forth—that we simply cannot afford to import. Recognizing that surpluses added to surpluses would be sheer folly, Congress has accordingly authorized the curbing of imports when such action is "essential to the orderly liquidation of temporary surpluses of stocks owned by the Government."

Admitting that our practices and our professions are not always consistent does not make it any less urgent to emphasize the necessity of buying more foreign goods. But it is essential to consider the limitations on buying imposed by our laws and policies. Within those limitations there is room for a great expansion of the import trade in goods that we do not produce, goods of which the supply is inadequate, and goods that compete in a healthy but not destructive fashion with American products. By frank confession we shall not only absolve ourselves from the suspicion entertained by foreigners that we do not mean what we say; we shall also allay fears that the interests of the American people may be forgotten in the attempt to make a success of our foreign-aid program.

What Price Gamblers?

By way of editorial postscript to Edward T. Folliard's informative and admirably prepared series of articles in The Washington Post last week, we suggest that the stories of the country's three leading "tygoons" have a meaning for the citizen as well as the law-enforcement officer and the legislator. The facts that Mr. Folliard dug out make it apparent that organized gambling is a large American enterprise and that its generous rewards are disconcertingly inconsistent with the notion that success comes only to the honest and law-abiding. Because of the known relationship between big gambling and worse crime no one can afford to be complacent over these disclosures of systematic flouting of local laws.

Messrs. Costello, Adonis and Erickson operate in a kind of borderland between the underworld and the world of legitimate activities. They are well acquainted, however, on both sides of the frontier. Mr. Folliard found no direct evidence that their gambling enterprises were in any way connected with the more sinister rackets concerned with extortion, intimidation and sometimes murder. Nor did he find any evidence to support the popular belief that professional gambling in the United States is now controlled and frequently rigged by a single, powerful syndicate. He did, however, find plenty of evidence that an intimate alliance does exist in many places between powerful gamblers and politicians.

This must be considered in connection with Mr. Costello's protestations to Mr. Folliard that, although he is a professional gambler, he does not operate where he is not wanted. Obviously Mr. Costello's way of determining whether or not he is wanted is not by plebiscite but by the attitude of the local authorities. And, as Mr. Folliard observed, there is no Federal law that prevents Mr. Costello from operating wherever he does consider himself wanted. At the same time there exists among many local and Federal law-enforcement officers an open disbelief in Mr. Costello's assertions that he is a gambler, pure and simple, having nothing to do with any of the various other rackets with which rumor so often associates his name.

But even taking Mr. Costello's professions at face value, the question remains what to do about him and about his colleagues, Mr. Adonis and Mr. Erickson. The most effective answer could be given by the people themselves. Free and otherwise law-abiding citizens ought to realize the consequences of giving financial support and social recognition to men of this ilk. Men and women who would not think of stealing or committing assault should be able to see that by placing illegal gambling bets they are contributing to the subversion of police departments and the general breakdown of law and order. Gambling could not possibly flourish if citizens who are law-abiding in other respects would turn their backs upon it.

Still more obvious is the duty of public officials and community leaders to take a realistic view of the gambling racket. Instead, party leaders, police officers and others sometimes appear in public with the "tygoons." In these circumstances it is difficult to persuade the rank and file to view these characters as public enemies. What we need in official life is more of the kind of contempt that Fiorello LaGuardia manifested toward the gamblers and their henchmen.

Some good should also result from keeping the gamblers and the lower denizens of the underworld in public view. Citizens must be aware of these slick operators and of their ill-gotten gains if they are to create the kind of public opinion that will keep police departments on their toes. The Federal Government, too, may well manifest a greater interest in the problem than the mere collection of income taxes from the gamblers. There has been some talk in Congress of a bill to control the transportation of gambling devices in interstate commerce. This may offer one constructive step that can be taken nationally. Some attention ought to be given also to the jurisdictional mumbo-jumbo that permits such well-known gambling operations as those of Snags Lewis to escape the toils of the law.

The major responsibility, however, falls upon the communities themselves. Any police force willing to put forth a determined and persistent effort can suppress organized gambling. This has been proved many times, and the big gamblers make a routine practice of shifting their operations away from cities where the law is vigorously enforced. Where citizens are not getting the right kind of enforcement, they will have to demand it if this crime-breeding business is to be squelched.

The Impotent Lords

Great Britain has reached the end of its long constitutional debate on the powers of the House of Lords. The Parliament bill, reducing by half the power of the Lords to delay legislation passed by the Commons, was finally rejected for a third time by the House of Lords. But this means only that the measure goes to the King for his assent on the authority of the Commons alone. The result will be a further substantial concentration of political power in the hands of a single legislative chamber.

The necessity for reforming the House of Lords has long been recognized. The Labor government raised logical objections against permitting a hereditary body to obstruct the program approved by the cabinet and the representatives of the people in the Commons. Last year all three parties in Britain concurred on reforming the membership of the House of Lords, subject to agreement on the question of its powers. Indeed, the act of 1911 which prescribed the powers that the Lords have since exercised, promised that it would be transformed from a hereditary to a popular body. But the Labor government chose to leave its membership as it was and to curtail its powers.

Lord Cecil expressed the fear that this bill will serve as a precedent for any further diminution of the powers of the second chamber which the cabinet of some future day may desire. According to the Times (London), many Conservatives fear that the second chamber is "left too weak to discharge its supreme function in the constitution, which is to impose an ultimate check on a possible attempt of a House of Commons majority to perpetuate itself, after the totalitarian pattern, after it has lost the confidence of the people." Many Americans, watching this evolution of the British government, will recall the conclusion of our own founding fathers that concentration of all power in the hands of one body is the very definition of tyranny.

Granting the necessity of some action, we should not be surprised if the British people have cause to regret curtailment of the second chamber's restraining power instead of reforming the chamber itself. Under our own system there is complaint of too many restraints, for Congress often restrains the President, and the Supreme Court may restrain both if they exceed their constitutional powers. But we doubt that any thoughtful student of government on this side of the Atlantic would be willing to concentrate all the executive and legislative power in the House of Representatives and at the same time give that body authority to change the Constitution at will.

Temporary majorities have their own capacity for tyranny. It would be a model legislative body indeed which did not at times need to be restrained and chastened. Of course, the House of Lords can still offer amendments to bills passed by the Commons. But the Lords' power of delaying bills of which they disapprove has been so curtailed that their amending powers may not be taken very seriously. We suspect that there will be much sympathy with the Times' plea for another look at the question of a second chamber with more emphasis upon changing its membership and less upon pulling its teeth.

Stand-Pat Colonialism

"Intervention" too often is the cry of those countries which are trying to hide something from scrutiny. Britain and France have raised what amounts to a cry of intervention in their defiance of the United Nations Assembly's request for political information on non-self-governing colonies. Inevitably their vote casts them in the role of defenders of the status quo in imperialism. This role is an unfortunate one which does not necessarily give a true picture of the progress in colonial administration, particularly under the British.

Legally, Britain and France have a point. The U. N. Charter recognizes a responsibility to furnish information on economic, social and educational conditions in dependent territories, but says nothing about political information. It is true that the Assembly's vote to require political information, despite the angry protest of Britain and France that they will not furnish it, does mean that the Assembly itself will be passing on what constitutes conditions of self-government.

But it is also true that in signing the U. N. Charter, Britain and France accepted a sacred trust to develop self-government. In the broad sense, this trust is a concern of all the United Nations, as the majority vote shows, and in bucking it Britain and France have taken a position in which they cannot possibly win. The urges toward nationalism and independence are a primary fact in the world today, as seen in India and Indonesia, where such movements have been channelized constructively. The great bulk of world opinion properly supports the right of peoples to determine their own future. Standoffishness implies an alliance with negative, do-nothing forces which can only furnish ammunition for the Communists.

The Middleman Again

Senator Gillette's investigation into the somehow static price of bread brings more food for thought if not for the consumer's dollar. The Senator asks why bread prices have not declined from their high level when the price of wheat is off 30 percent or more, and he points to the food processors. Retailers' margins have remained approximately the same, but testimony before the Gillette Subcommittee indicates that one baking company more than doubled its profit between 1940 and 1948. It is also common practice for some baking companies to sell bread to the armed services at as much as 40 percent under retail prices.

Undoubtedly an objective investigation will bring out conditions in defense of the middleman's position. The cost of wheat is only one of many items involved in marketing bread. Wages have risen and may have wiped out the saving on wheat prices; transportation costs also have gone up. But it still is relevant that, of the $75 decline in the cost of food for a family of three over the last year, the fall in prices at the farm accounts for $65 and the reduction in marketing charges only $10. Obviously this minimizes the farmer's responsibility for inflexible food prices, but whether the middleman is getting an extortionate percentage is something else. Here is where the Gillette Subcommittee can perform a useful service in getting the facts and in placing the blame where it belongs. John Q. Consumer wants to know, as he pays 15 cents for a loaf of bread that used to cost 10, who is getting what cut.

BACCHUS IN A GARDEN OF NEVADA

Bacchus is sleeping now, beneath the vine.
His little loves lie crumpled here and there,
His hand rests on the white bull and the wine,
Tipped from the cup, runs down among his hair.

So late, Diana comes across the night
And finds his drowsy head, and seeks his eyes,
Beneath his eyelids sealed against her light,
And kisses him awake, and beaming, sighs.
Then he in heaviness falls back asleep,
And she on silver tiptoes swiftly goes
And leaves him there to slumber till the peep
Of day shall find him ruddy as a rose . . .
Oh, let no fool despoil the purple fruit,
The god has left his footprint at the root.

Sex Offenders

I agree with "Mother's" letter published December 2 that something drastic should be done about sex offense cases. My suggestion is that vastly larger sums of money be spent for mental hygiene and psychiatric centers to get at the real cause of these offenses. Laws which merely serve to jail offenders have a limited protective value for the public. Surely, if punishment were a very effective deterrent, crime should have been virtually wiped out in the Middle Ages, with such devices as the rack and other punishments which are now considered inhuman.

Psychological study of cases reveals that in many instances it is a question of the offender's losing all conscious control—"blacking out" in popular phraseology. How can the knowledge that there is a severe penalty serve to deter such an offender?

A more wholesome, natural understanding of sex taught to children by their parents should help a lot to prevent some of the children of today from becoming the "maniacs" of tomorrow. Also, greater familiarity on the part of the public with the writings of the psychiatrists—the works of Sigmund Freud, Carl Jung and others, which are available in our free public libraries—should be of value toward the ultimate solution of this problem. Rebuilding Germany

It was eight years ago today when Japan's air force, under pressure of Adolf Hitler, attacked Pearl Harbor in the Pacific and thus officially made the United States a fighting member of the Allies of World War II.

But what is happening today? We pity the poor Germans, who were dragged into a war they did not want.

We feed the poor, hungry Germans, send them soap and clothing and rebuild their industries without a thought of the future—a future that might prove even more disastrous than the last 35 years have been.

World War II is not over by a long shot.

Instead of sending food, clothing, soap and cigarettes to Germany; instead of us rebuilding Germany's industries, send the Germans the raw materials to grow and raise their own food, to manufacture their own clothing and to rebuild their own industries on a limited scale, merely to improve their own economic situation and conditions. Keep the management divided under international control.

Let Germany prove herself worthy first of the honor of being a peaceable nation among peace-loving nations of this world by officially and in the hearts and minds of the population rebuking any ideas and power-dreams of nazism, communism or fascism—and then, and only then, accept Germany into the group of Western civilized democracies.

The "Tygoons"

Mr. Folliard's articles on our twentieth century "tygoons" are exceptional articles. First for the conversance with his subject shown in his presentation of Messrs. Costello, Adonis and Erickson and second for introducing them to us as such likable fellows, conservative in their habits, family men, do-gooders, with open pocketbooks for a needy cause, able politicians and each in his own right a leader of men. I, as a mother, could not hope for better qualities for my own sons.

Is Mr. Folliard ever going to tell us any of the tales he has omitted about the means used by the "tygoons" to achieve their lofty status?

Is he going to point out to us that these likable fellows who have so assiduously stayed within the letter of the law are fundamentally opposed to the spirit of our democracy?

Is Mr. Folliard going to draw a precise moral from their stories for his impressionable young readers?

I wonder if we are again about to enter a phase as in the 20's, when it was smart to have a gangster or two as a pal. I read the psychiatrists often advised "tygoons" to meet us "nice" people. After reading Mr. Folliard's off-whitewash I want to meet them "nice" people. J. W.

Bell-Pushers

Some time ago your readers conducted a hot debate on the pros and cons of James J. Metcalfe's "Portraits." As for myself, the debate seemed as trivial as the subject in question, hence I never raised my voice. However, Mr. Metcalfe's recent bit of backwash titled "Door to Door" elicits my viewpoint.

Having been in the selling profession for some time and having trained hundreds of men in this lucrative field, I know whereof I speak in defending the "bell-pushers." It is true, as Mr. Metcalfe points out, that there are rackets in this business, but there are also rackets in any other business, and it remains for the individual to decide for himself whether or not he is spending his money wisely. It is, of course, the unscrupulous characters in any profession who make it difficult for those who wish to conduct their business legitimately.

What Mr. Metcalfe doesn't seem to realize is that by passing up every call—or as he phrases it, "every piercing of his privacy"—he is also passing up opportunities to purchase some of this country's finest products, sold directly to the consumer at considerable savings.

If, however, Mr. Metcalfe's "privacy is pierced," I am sure it is not so much by salesmen as it is by his own conscience—for accepting money in return for the ludicrous dribble which he peddles.

Medical School Dogs

Thank you for giving front-page space on December 2 to the story about the delivery of dogs to Maryland University for vivisection. This man, John S. Tuck from Hershey, Pa., furnishes animals regularly to the university and Johns Hopkins medical schools. Had the authorities of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals been able to prove that these dogs were well loved pets for whom owners are searching and grieving, stolen for this sale, would Tuck have been freed? How could one kennel own so many dogs?

I only wish that you had sent your own reporter to the scene, rather than used an Associated Press article, and would sympathetically champion the great cause of antivivisection.

Confusion In Names

On December 4 a letter appeared in your column signed "Margaret Moore, Washington." As I am an elementary school principal in the District of Columbia public schools and as the letter criticized teachers in the Cardozo High School and as my name happens to be Margaret Moore also, I wish you would make a statement in your column to the effect that that letter was not written by me.

Virginia Mental Care

As a resident of Virginia, aware and disturbed over the shockingly poor conditions of our mental hospitals, I was very glad to see your series of articles. I have tried many times, many ways to have those conditions brought before the public without any success. The only way, I have been given to understand by people in authority, to get the ball rolling for improvements is through pressure by the people and newspapers upon the State government.

As long as the people do not complain and insist upon changes, nothing much will be done. Most people are sadly unaware of what our hospitals are like unless they have had some personal contact, and that doesn't include any sizable portion. The rest of us, informed by our newspapers, could be aroused and demand improvements.

Such was the case, purely and simply in the State of Oklahoma, and now they have an enviable setup. We in this area could do the same. The Virginia State government has adequate funds and a fine and interested director of mental hygiene and hospitals.

The letter to the editor by John McCormick on December 2 was important. I look forward to some follow-up articles as a result of the Duke report and hope The Washington Post will keep the ball rolling on improvements in conditions in mental hospitals in Virginia.

Bronze Disease Cure

The following caption, heading an article in your issue of November 28, "Two at Hopkins Find Bronze Disease Cure," requires some corrective comments. I wish to point out that practically all the claims attributed to the scientists at Johns Hopkins as to novelty or origin of the ideas are in error. It should be pointed out that Dr. Colin G. Fink, of Columbia University, has done these things a long time ago. Other investigators have explored other aspects too. I suggest the following references as evidence:

"Restoration of Ancient Bronzes and Natural and Artificial Patinas," by Dr. C. G. Fink, 1928 Encyclopedia Brittanica; "Modern Methods for the Preservation of Ancient Metal Objects," by Dr. C. G. Fink, in Metropolitan Museum Studies, Number II, parts 2 and 4 (1930).

Other references are in: Technical Studies in the Field of Fine Arts, Volume 2, page 34 (1933) and page 58; Metals Technology, Volume 3, February, 1936; Field Museum of Natural History, Museum Technology, Series H3, August 9 (1930), Chicago; Metropolitan Museum Studies, No. II, part 2, page 236 (1930); Iron Age, Volume 137, pages 34 and 106, February 27 (1936).

It is hoped that these citations will clear up any misunderstanding on this matter.

Keeping Up With The Atom

By Malvina Lindsay

Safety First Plans

Scene—A meeting of the Association for Advancement.

CHAIRMAN—We have met to consider our personal preparedness for the next war—er, that is, I mean for any national emergency.

Mrs. Smart—The first thing is to buy supplies—for our members of course. Take coffee. Now I've already laid up enough to last me the next nine years.

Mrs. March—So that's why I'm paying 83 cents a pound!

Mrs. Smart—You have to look out for Number One.

Mrs. March—This is where I came in—about eight years ago.

Judge Pudd—Now, now, we mustn't get excited. War is not inevitable but——

Mr. Dare—Just a minute! As president of Atomic Age Citizens, Inc., may I ask what we're doing to prevent the next war?

Mr. Hardpann—We've got to be realistic. I propose we send a committee to Chicago to investigate the new atom house of concrete and steel being built by the National Association of Real Estate Boards and the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Mr. Stepp—Mr. Chairman, as a progressive, up-and-coming organization we should look further ahead. We must plan on deep underground safety, since I understand the coming hydrogen bomb will burn up large portions of the earth's surface.

MRS. DASHBUTTON—One word about nylon stockings before we go any further. In the last war I got caught short on nylons because I was too highminded to hoard. We should be laying in supplies right now.

Mr. Stepp—It wouldn't be in line with progress to lay in nylon stockings. Radioactivity would destroy them.

Mr. Vanderpuffer—That sounds like propaganda! As president of the Status Quo Protective League, I protest all this scare talk put out by those atom scientists. What we need are more loyalty tests.

Chairman (rapping)—Mr. Nesselrode Groove, civic leader, wants to speak.

Mr. Groove—We should look before we leap. Why don't we appoint a committee to explore the caves in this vicinity?

Mr. Dare—A most fitting gesture!

Mrs. March—But what about germ warfare? Wouldn't germs penetrate caves?

Mr. Stepp—That's right! We must keep ahead of the germs as well as the atom. I understand a toxic substance has been produced, an ounce of which can destroy 180 million humans.

Mr. Parrott—There's always a defense for every offense.

Mr. Dare—And then a new offense to overcome the latest defense. I tell you, this is becoming the house that Jack built. Why don't we have a committee to consider what we can do to head off war—through an Atlantic Union, or a world government or smarter diplomacy——

Mr. Vanderpuffer—And give up some of our national sovereignty!

MR. HARDPANN—We've got to be realistic.

Mr. Dare—Do you call building a steel house or taking to caves realistic when cosmic rays—which may become the ultimate weapon—can penetrate the depths of the earth? How realistic is it to try to hide from a guided missile, a germ, even an old-fashioned bomb, when something deadlier is on the way? It's more realistic to join up with other nations——

Mr. Stalactite—It's too soon for such idealistic nonsense. The world's not ready.

Mrs. Preen—Mr. Chairman, that reminds me! Inflation caught me after the last war. We should be buying some good classic wool suits——

Mrs. March—And no doubt some costume jewelry for cave wear!

Mr. Stepp—Let me remind you that our enemies—I mean adversaries—in the next—er—national emergency may use atomic clouds. We will need atomproof clothing as well as germ masks.

Mr. Hardpann—We've got to be realistic.

Mr. Stepp—Yes, and progressive. We may need to wear electronic headsets to find our way in the dark, carry Geiger counters to locate radio activity, and detectors to warn us of guided missiles.

Chairman—Mrs. Montclair St. Vitus, our ace project woman, wants to speak.

Mrs. St. Vitus—I suggest we have a committee confer with some of our topflight designers at once as to how all these elements of our costumes in the next—er—national emergency can be coordinated. We might even have a fashion show——

Mrs. Feddup—I'm screaming—right now——

Chairman—Order please . . . The meeting is adjourned!

Manipulated Food Prices

According to a report by Lila H. Thompson, Mr. Oris V. Wells, chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, told a Senate investigating committee that, despite the high cost of food, the American people are eating about 10 percent better than they did 15 years ago.

Does Mr. Wells realize that if the Government would stop buying up food commodities with the consumers' tax money, in order to keep prices up, that the American people might be eating 25 percent or 30 percent better than they ever did, and at a much reduced national grocery bill? J. T. BOWERS.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Two Steps Back

IT IS time to record that the State Department has sheered away from the scheme for closer union between the United States and the British Commonwealth, which was put forward by George Kennan last summer in the heat of the British monetary crisis.

This development is of crucial importance, as representing a tentative choice between the department's two major schools of thought about American foreign relations. Kennan, the department's chief planner, is the most important figure in the school which must now be considered the minority. Crudely speaking, the Kennan view is that the Anglo-American partnership is the central element in the strength of the Western world, and that maintaining this partnership should have first priority.

For this reason, Kennan has long believed that the Anglo-American partnership ought to be given more organic expression. As long as two years ago, when the gravity of Britain's difficulties first became apparent, he prepared studies on the subject. And the famous "Kennan plan" for something like an Anglo-American union, which was put up to Secretary of State Acheson when Sir Stafford Cripps and Ernest Bevin came to Washington in September, was no more than the logical outgrowth of the State Department planner's previous work on the problem.

SO FAR as could be judged at that time, the State Department here was then strongly inclined to accept the Kennan arguments. Indeed, the Kennan plan would probably have been discussed with the British ministers in September, if Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder had not disliked the idea.

On the other hand, when the existence of a project for closer Anglo-American relations became known, the repercussions were violent. The French government, always fearful of being left out in the cold, gave voice to the most bitter protests. And what was actually more important, the leading American officials abroad strongly concurred.

In fact, European ECA Chief Averell Harriman, Ambassador to Paris David Bruce, and Minister to Paris Charles E. Bohlen subsequently all denounced the project in the strongest terms. Their arguments were that nothing could disturb Paris more than any bilateral arrangement between Britain and this country; and that such an arrangement would also destroy all hope of effective European union.

The chief men in the State Department here, who are always easily impressed by protests from Paris, were already shaken by the French government's reaction. The support given the French viewpoint by Harriman, Bruce and Bohlen was apparently decisive. The project for giving organic form to the Anglo-American partnership has therefore been shelved by Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson, at least for the time being.

THIS IN TURN indicates a larger tendency of American foreign policy to pursue the shadow rather than the substance. After all, something very like a working partnership already exists between this country and Britain. If the partnership is ever dissolved (as it may well be, by the consequences of Britain's economic trouble) the whole Western front against Soviet imperialism will collapse in ruins. The object of the Kennan plan was precisely to avert this danger.

Furthermore, if there is to be a European union, which must be considered far from certain, its best reinsurance would consist of a strong Britain and a strong America, further strengthened by a close working relationship, and standing as the new union's unchallengeable guarantors. Far from leaving France naked before Germany, a European union guaranteed by a united Britain and America would be France's best hope of protection from aggression, whether by the Germans or the Soviets.

Finally, the formation of a closer relationship between this country and Britain is a practical project, which can be carried through rapidly and will bear immediate fruit. Yet this project has now been sacrificed, if the signs mean anything, to the project of European union, on the supposition that this is competitive. And this has been done although there should not be any real competition between these two projects, and although effective European union still looks like diplomatic pie in the sky.

This is another instance of the habit of hoping for the best without preparing for the worst, which is also observable in our defense policy and our Far Eastern policy. In the whole crowded field of bad political habits, none is more pernicious than this.

FAO Battles Over Where To Meet Next

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization early this morning moved towards adjournment of its stormiest session with its most important questions unsolved.

Although it voted a week ago to move its headquarters to Rome, when it quit early today hadn't decided when the change would be made nor how it would be financed.

Instead, it left the matter up to the next conference and then battled about when and where that next conference would be held.

An effort by the United Kingdom to have the next conference next November in Washington was beaten down. Then the delegates voted to meet in April, 1951, unless the FAO council—a smaller interim governing body—should decide otherwise.

That leaves until April, 1951, the all-important question of how the move to Rome is to be financed. Earlier the conference had voted ot accept a report of Commission I that the funds necessary to move to Rome be borrowed. Where the borrowing may be made was not stated but everybody expected that Uncle Sam would be touched for the necessary funds.

The Conference also voted to set up a Committee on Commodity Problems, in place of an earlier proposed International Commodity Clearing House. This committee would operate to bring countries with food surpluses into negotiation with countries needing food.

An amendment by Dr. Oscar Gans, Cuban delegate, to provide machinery by which soft currency nations might finance such purchases from hard currency countries, was adopted. This amendment recommends that FAO maintain "cooperation with the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund" which would "lead to greater investments in agriculture and related industries."

The conference also adopted a change in the contributions to maintain FAO, which would increase the United States assessment about from $1,250,000 a year to $1,355,000, or from 25 percent to 27.1 percent of the total cost of FAO.

Gillette Asked To Visit Brazil In Coffee Quiz

Brazilian coffee growers are concerned about the probe into coffee prices by the Senate Agriculture subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa).

Yesterday the Sociedade Rural Brasiliero, of Sao Paulo, cabled Gillette asking him to make a personal visit to Brazilian coffee plantations.

"We should be glad to produce before your committee the true Brazilian economic figures, cost of product and prices," Francisco Malta Cardoza, president of the group, cabled.

Yesterday the committee received from Mrs. C. E. Barber of 3423 Carpenter st. se. a tin of Wilkins coffee, on which the price mark had been changed four times, from 57 cents to 58 to 60, and finally to 66 cents. Mrs. Barber said she had bought the coffee at an Acme Market at 3839 Alabama ave. se.

Evidence concerning this year's Brazilian coffee crop conflicted with dispatches from Rio Janeiro. Albert M. Posterman of the Commerce Department's International Trade Office, said that American imports this year are larger than last year. He said the American embassy in Rio has reported that the Brazilian government would not issue a forecast on the 1950 crop until March. However, he said "on the basis of recent blossoming reports, the embassy hazards the forecast that the 1950 harvest will exceed this year's by 500,000 to a million bags." This report from the embassy, he said, was dated November 7 last.

However, a United Press dispatch from Rio stated that the government there yesterday officially estimated this year's crop as 17,191,683 bags—a decrease of 99,400 bags from last year.

Sao Paulo, Brazil's largest coffee producing state, was the worst sufferer in a recent drought, but larger crops elsewhere partly offset these losses.

Prewar coffee production in Brazil averaged 23 million bags—about five million bags a year above this year.

ADA Urges Byrnes for Coalition Chief

A suggestion that James F. Byrnes take over leadership of "the North-South conservative coalition" came yesterday from Americans for Democratic Action (ADA), a group on the other side of the political lineup.

Byrnes, who has served as a Senator from South Carolina, Supreme Court justice and Secretary of State, has been critical of the Truman Administration for months.

Charles M. La Follette, former Republican member of the House from Indiana who now is national director of the ADA, made its proposal to Byrnes in a letter. The ADA is a political organization including a number of persons who were active in the Roosevelt New Deal and, La Follette said, is based on "liberal principles."

La Follette said he was writing as a Republican "who quit his party to work for liberalism" to Byrnes as a Democrat "who has left his party to work for conservatism."

The letter said:

"I am sure you will agree that there is a very real kinship between many Northern Republicans and many Southern Democrats. A great number of Republican party leaders are in reality 'Northern men of Southern principles'; scratch a Dixiecrat and you will find a Northern or Eastern special interest. Dixiecrats fume at proposals for guaranteeing civil rights; many Northern Chambers of Commerce have an equal distaste for FEPC. I suggest that all of them ought to live in the same house together."

$18,675 Auto Holdup Staged at Courthouse

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 6 (AP).—Two stickup men took $18,675.61 from six bakery employes today in front of the Knox County Courthouse.

The gunmen, in an automobile, drew up alongside another car in which the six victims were halted at a traffic light.

They forced R. S. McCall, office manager of Kern's Bakery to hand over a cloth bag containing the loot, including $1881 in cash and the rest in checks. The five passengers in McCall's car were women.

Truman Runs 'Dead Heat' In Reducing

Key West, Fla., Dec. 6 (AP).—President Truman bulged at the waistline today while his temporary "White House" bulged with advisers working on the next phase of his Fair Deal strategy.

Tipping the scales at 177 pounds, he called off bets with two of his even stouter aides growing out of a pre-Thanksgiving weight-reducing contest.

The contest was declared a "dead heat," each of the trio having dropped "about three or four pounds."

It started at Charlottesville, Va., with Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Army aide, and Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, presidential physician, weighing about 220 each, Mr. Truman a generous 180. The idea was that Mr. Truman had to get down to 175 by Thanksgiving. His aides to 200.

Graham's arrival last night enabled the President to call off the whole thing. The physician has been to Peru and Guatemala.

Meanwhile, Mr. Truman gathered his assistants about him to talk over his State of the Union message in January.

Meanwhile, Charles G. Ross, the press secretary, made it clear President Truman is not planning any recess appointment of a successor to David E. Lilienthal as chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Truman Fixes Dec. 10 As "Human Rights" Day

Key West, Fla., Dec. 6 (AP).—President Truman said today that the attainment of basic human rights for men and women everywhere "is essential to the peace we are seeking."

He said so in a formal proclamation designating December 10 as United Nations "Human Rights" Day and asking its appropriate observance in this country.

Stories Reveal Fear Induced In Russians by Secret Police

By Chalmers M. Roberts

Fourth of a Series

The Soviet Union is shot through with fear of the secret police, it is plain from the stories of those Russians who have escaped or deserted.

The secret police, once known as the GPU, then as the NKVD, now as MGB, is given credit for omnipresence, undoubtedly more credit than it deserves. But the fear of the knock on the door is so great it can cause physical paralysis, as well as mental. Witness the case of Simeon Korin.

At 18 he joined the Whites fighting the Reds during the Russian Revolution. He was captured, but a sympathetic doctor helped him escape. He obtained false documents, became an engineer. But his past pursued him. A friend tipped him off—a common practice in Russia — that the NKVD was making inquiries about him and he moved to another city. Four years later, at the time of the vast 1937 purge, Korin's closest friend was arrested and he lived in fear of momentary seizure. His wife became ill. Then he was denounced as a "white" at the Rostov agricultural school where he was teaching. It was too much. His left side was paralyzed for months. It turned out, however, that by the time he recovered the purge had subsided and he now says he owes his life to fear of the secret police.

Two Types of Police

Today the Russian police—the old NKVD—is in two parts: the MGB (Ministry of State Security) which is the secret arm, and the MVD (Ministry of Internal Affairs), the open arm which includes special troop units, all the local law-enforcement officials, the custodians of the records from births to deaths, and to controller of the vast forced labor camps. Even the atom-bomb project is under control of Beria, master of both MGB and MVD.

Igor Bagritsky, now 34, was a Komsomol (Young Communist), a Red army soldier, party member and an NKVD official. At the NKVD school at K— before the war, he studied police methods, criminal law, intelligence, party history. Marxist dialtics. He recounts:

"The school had its own net of informers. This tended to discourage mutual confidence, although the NKVD did try to instill an esprit de corps among students by stressing the crucial role the NKVD played as the 'sword of the revolution' and 'defender of the motherland' against foreign aggression and internal espionage."

Bagritsky reported everyone knew that a "great percentage" of those denounced, arrested and punished were innocent. He shrugged his shoulders, adding:

"But the NKVD had its own inner compulsion. Its job was to discover enemies and, as in other Soviet organizations, the NKVD agents engaged in socialist competition with each other to prove their zeal and efficiency. It had its own quotas and plans and where necessary enemies were manufactured."

As to "manufactured" enemies, consider the case of Ivan Grigoryev, an electrical engineer now 43. In 1930 he was arrested as a member of the Prom (Industrial) Party, supposedly a conspiracy of technicians and engineers of the old intelligentsia to overthrow the Stalin regime. Grigoryev was charged with being a courier between Prom units in the Urals and the Donbass. This is Grigoryev's explanation of the whole affair:

GPU Imagined It

"The Prom Party was a figment of the GPU's imagination. No such party existed. It was true that many of the old engineers and professors had 'negative' attitudes toward the Soviet regime. I don't believe they engaged in sabotage and I'm sure there was no conspiratorial organization.

"The purpose of the Prom Party affair was two-fold: to serve as a prophylactic, to scare anyone who might be tempted to oppose the regime, and to provide a scapegoat for dissatisfactions generated by the falling standard of living under the current plan.

"At the Prom trial, there were eight defendants, the chief one being Professor Ramzin, supposedly the party head. But I believe Ramzin was working hand in hand with the GPU. Today he has a fairly prominent position in the Soviet Union. Two other professors who refused to go along with the mock trial were put to death. I was given a five-year sentence, worked in a labor camp in the Urals and the Far East."

The NKVD had other methods, too. Petr Teplitsky was a teacher who was close to his superior. In a moment of confidence the superior told him:

"I have just been called in by the NKVD district (rayon) office and told to organize a drinking affair at home for my staff. I was told to raise political questions during the evening to provoke discussion and discover if there are any enemies of the regime on the staff. I find this most distasteful, but must comply. Because you are a true friend, I am putting you on notice to take proper precautions."

Fear of NKVD investigation played a part in Sasha Pokrovsky's decision to desert the Soviet zone of Germany in 1947 although he was an officer holding a responsible military government job. He had been sent hastily to Germany to round up tools and machinery needed for one of the Commissariats of Heavy Industry back home. He said:

"While I was eager to go to Germany, I was afraid that since I had only temporary documents — my real ones having been conveniently 'lost' during the war—a careful NKVD investigation would probably reveal my true identity. My documents were given only a perfunctory verification and I went to Germany. In 1947 when Kaganovitch (one of the Politburo members) took direct charge of the ministry, an intensive verification of all employes in Germany was begun. This frightened me and I decided to escape and I did."

Back With Family in Deal

Pavel Tarassov, now 32, is a native of Archangel in the far north. During summers he served on a naval ship and visited Holland in 1932 where he was impressed by the "prosperity" of that depression year. His father later was arrested and Pavel tried everything he could think of to obtain his release. He even appealed in person to the NKVD's Leningrad office only to be told he would be arrested if he were not out of the city within an hour.

Then he was called back to Leningrad, told that the NKVD could get him back into the school from which he had been expelled on his father's arrest. There were conditions: If he would work for the NKVD and if he would break completely with his family. He agreed and went back to school.

But he was foolish enough to write home. The NKVD called him in at once and told him he would be off to a forced labor camp the next time. On graduation he became an NKVD agent on the Baltic fleet, collecting intelligence on foreign ports the ships visited. He was captured by the Nazis in 1942.

All these experiences with the Soviet secret police, in its various names and forms, have given the Russians interrogated in Germany an intense suspicion and distrust of everyone they meet—fellow Soviet deserters, former Soviet prisoners-of-war, Germans, British or Americans.

Church Council Votes to Aid In Antisegregation Suit

Atlanta, Dec. 6 (AP).—Leaders of more than 28 million United States Protestant Church members voted today to help Negroes in a court battle to end racial separation.

Only Southern Presbyterians dissented as the policy was proclaimed by the executive committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America.

The council will intervene with a plea before the United States Supreme Court in the case of a Texas Negro, Herman Marion Sweatt, who is seeking admission to a white State university.

The church council will argue that separation itself is unequal, unchristian and illegal discrimination.

The brief will note that the Presbyterian Church in the United States, the Southern branch of Presbyterians, abstains from the policy. All other large Southern Protestant denominations agreed, except Southern Baptists, who are not members of the Federal Council.

Another report called for a reshaping of American policy in the Far East to help the masses of people toward better living conditions.

It held that communism has made big gains in Asia, not so much through a test of arms as through a revolutionary "mass protest against grinding poverty."

Michigan U. Man Given AEC Post

Dr. George G. Brown of the University of Michigan has been named director of the engineering division of the Atomic Energy Commission.

The commission announced yesterday that Brown will begin on a part-time basis immediately and on a full-time basis in the spring. While with the commission, he will be on leave from his post as chairman of the Department of Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering at the University of Michigan.

Israel Railways Halted By 24-Hour Walkout

Haifa, Israel, Dec. 6 (AP).—Railway lines ceased operation in Israel today as 1250 rail workers staged a 24-hour strike to press demands for higher wages and overtime pay. The railways are Government-operated.

Proprietors of restaurants and cafes also closed down for 24 hours in protest at government food regulations which include a ration coupon system for customers and price fixing.

One on the Aisle—

Counterfeiters Have an Inning

By Richard L. Coe

"TRAPPED," at the Unnatural National, is another in the parade of pictures devoted to Government agents licking the lawbreakers. This time, counterfeiting is the subject.

It's not a bad effort of its kind, though strictly tailored to formula. The fact that most of the players are unfamiliar helps considerably in getting you interested, though for the picture to be following the two-week run of a Western in the only suitable house currently existing for live theater here does give you pause.

Sitting in the National with a hundred-odd morning time-killers, you can't help thinking about the general insanity that prevails in theater management. That the National is losing money every week is obvious, though it's losing money for exactly the opposite reason other live theaters are losing money across the country this season.

There are this week 29 companies playing touring engagements across the United States. As usual, business for some is sensational ("Kiss Me Kate" weekly grosses $50,000 in Chicago and "Oklahoma!" is well over the $30,000 mark in Seattle). Fair is the word for "The Student Prince" in Pittsburgh, while "Summer and Smoke" drew a mild $12,000 for a Columbus-Indianapolis split week. "Detective Story" is having an odd road career, but evidently building slowly for its fifth Chicago week. Susan Peters seems to be doing okay with "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and "A Streetcar Named Desire" is having a big two-week stay in New Orleans.

Generally speaking, upped rail rates, customer resistance to anything but the best and the always tricky pre-Christmas weeks indicate the rest of the road isn't having too bright a season.

But Is it Business?

But for a good theater town and a good play, the combination is, as always, money in the box office.

So what happens? Washington, admittedly an above-average theater town, is bypassed, which means that even sending a play to Baltimore results in higher railroad fares for a company, and it, too, suffers a two-week dark spell.

All this results from the decision of a man who's built a fortune from the American theater as a good businessman.

But is it good business to keep a theater in the shadows; to say you're going to have a policy of the "finest" pictures and then show Westerns and decidedly minor releases; to say you'll abide by the practice of a city when it's been shown by actual example that the practice of the city on a specific cultural level is exactly the reverse of your own?

If this is the kind of business that's been ruling the American theater, small wonder it's such a mess.

THE BELASCO? This week a bid is being submitted by the American National Theater and Academy to the Public Buildings Administration . . . It's too early to predict what the results will be, but thanks to conversations promoted by Senators Flanders and Douglas, there is at least a real basis for general agreement . . . New York is especially hopeful about leasing the theater, which seems, considering the huge audience here which has been ignored by a small businessman, to be good business for all concerned.

IT'S SATURDAY openings until after the New Year for the Loew theaters on F st . . . This Saturday the Palace will bring in "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," latest of the Georgie Jessel nostalgic, Technicolor musicals . . . The same day, the mature Mickey Rooney will be starring at the Capitol in a yarn about auto racing, "The Big Wheel," with Owen McGivney doing his quick-change "Oliver Twist" as the stage highlight . . . The Columbia's habit of not being able to make up its mind continues, but there'll be a new bill this Saturday.

"TRAPPED." Eagle Lion release produced by Bryan Foy. Story and screen play by Earl Felton and George Zuckerman. Directed by Richard Fleischer. At the National.

Lane Calls Md. Assembly

rected by the General Assembly, it would serve to permit Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties, among others, to carry out construction programs with State money instead of through authorized bond issues.

$5,465,000 from State

Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of Montgomery schools, said about $5,465,000 would come from the State, although the County Council has authorized issuance of bonds up to that amount if the State law is not re-enacted.

G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of schools in Prince Georges County, said eight million dollars would be available from the State rather than through bond issues approved in a special bill for the county during the last session of the legislature.

Prince Georges went ahead and borrowed $650,000 of its estimated needs of $10,650,000 under this authority, Shugart said. All but two million dollars is expected to be derived from the "credit pool" before the end of 1950, he added.

ALL-STAR CAST: Robert Morley and Wendy Hiller, above, have two of the leads in Gabriel Pascal's notable film version of "Major Barbara," now revived on the Dupont screen. Others in the cast include Rex Harrison, Deborah Kerr, Emlyn Williams and Robert Newton. In the decade since the filming, all have become more important stars

Mrs. Chambers Adds to Story Of Hiss Family's Friendship

NYHT News Service

New York, Dec. 6.—Mrs. Esther Shemitz Chambers, wife of Whittaker Chambers, today retold at the second perjury trial of Alger Hiss her story of friendly relations between the Hiss and Chambers families between 1935 and the end of 1937.

In a number of details, Mrs. Chambers corroborated the story previously told by her husband in support of his contention that Hiss gave him secret State Department documents for transmission to a Communist spy ring in the first three months of 1938. Hiss was indicted when he denied this accusation before a grand jury.

Mrs. Chambers said nothing about documents or espionage, but she supported her husband's story of an intimate relationship between the two families.

Adds Few Details

Like her husband, Mrs. Chambers added a few details today that did not appear in her testimony at the first trial, which ended in a hung jury last July 8. Today she remembered seeing Mr. and Mrs. Hiss and Chambers plan a trip to Long Eddy, N. Y., which Chambers described for the first time in his opening testimony at this trial.

Mrs. Chambers described, more briefly than she had done at the first trial, a long series of visits exchanged by the Hiss and Chambers families. She added one new occasion, which she said took place at the Hiss home on Volta pl. in Washington, but she could not remember the date.

She recalled that on this occasion she and Chambers were standing in the hallway with Mrs. Hiss at dusk, when Hiss arrived home in a swallowtail coat. Mrs. Hiss put out her left hand to switch on the light, Mrs. Chambers said, "and we had a kind of discussion there jokingly about the formal clothes a person of Mr. Hiss' position would have to wear."

She added that he had been out all day "on some duties relative to his position," and looked "quite weary and worn." Hiss at that time was assistant to Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre.

Chaos Returns Once

Under the comparatively gentle handling of Claude B. Cross, chief defense counsel, Mrs. Chambers almost escaped the hopeless confusion into which Lloyd Paul Stryker threw her in the first trial.

For a few minutes complete chaos returned, however. That was when Cross referred to the succession of Christmas, New Year's, housewarming and wedding anniversary parties about which Mrs. Chambers several times changed her testimony during the first trial.

According to her testimony today, Mrs. Chambers drank champagne and got sick at one of these parties, and Chambers drank port and got sick at another party, but which party was which and where or when any of them took place was still a subject of confusion when Cross dropped the subject.

Cross showed that for a period of at least a year, from the spring of 1936 to the spring of 1937, Mr. and Mrs. Chambers lived in Pennsylvania and did not visit the Hiss family. He quoted from prior testimony in which Mrs. Chambers said that during that period the Hiss family did not visit the Chambers family either.

Under cross-examination Mrs. Chambers quickly became confused about the numerous names she and her husband had used and the many homes they had during this period. She explained that it was difficult to recall things which "for 14 years I tried to forget." She did not recognize bank books bearing her name and had no recollection of the bank accounts they referred to, though the name of one of the banks was vaguely familiar to her and she faintly remembered cashing a check in some other town whose name she had forgotten.

Hisses Never Knew Last Name

She testified that Mr. and Mrs. Hiss never knew her last name and always called her "Lisa" and her husband "Carl." She added that Mr. and Mrs. Hiss invented a last name for her to use while she and her husband were occupying the Hisses' apartment on 28th st., Washington, but she could not remember what it was.

She said that besides using the name Chambers she also used the names Breen and Cantwell during the period, but the only one that Hiss ever heard of was Breen. Chambers previously said substantially the same thing, but Hiss contends he knew Mr. and Mrs. Chambers as Mr. and Mrs. George Crosley.

Today, however, Mrs. Chambers said that on one occasion at that time "Mr. and Mrs. Hiss came to see us when they were returning from some trip with my husband and brought me an antique Boston rocker which they bought in Westchester." No such trip within that period has hitherto been described by either Mr. or Mrs. Chambers.

Mrs. Chambers said that some time in the last year Chambers gave her his passport to hold while he was away testifying in Washington or Baltimore, and she hid it in the chicken house. She said she did not open it.

Short Circuit Blamed For Trolley Mishap

A short circuit in the control box of an "old model" trolley car was the cause of the smoke and shower of electrical sparks which panicked passengers of a streetcar early Monday night, Capital Transit Co. representatives said yesterday.

Seven persons were injured attempting to leave the trolley, at Georgia ave. and Irving st. nw. The company said it was investigating to determine the cause of the short.

Eddie Robinson May Go to Yankees for 4 Players

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Baltimore, Dec. 6.—The least expendable commodity at these baseball meetings is, of all things, money. There's virtually no demand for it, except by the somewhat impoverished St. Louis Browns, and the club owner who attempts to make a deal on a cash basis is being rudely laughed at, or otherwise scorned.

It's no lack of confidence in the stability of the United States banknote, but as a medium of baseball barter cash has been devalued. It is no substitute for players, and as the saying goes, with no pun intended, "it's only money." Of that, most of the big league clubs have plenty either from the swollen gate receipts of the past few years or the millionaire fortunes of their owners.

Povich

Clark Griffith could get a couple of hundred thousand this instant for his good pitcher, Ray Scarborough, from either the Yankees or the Red Sox. But with it he couldn't buy a comparable player, and if Scarborough were sold only for cash Griffith would risk mob action by Washington fans.

The ers has passed when the rich clubs like the Yankees, Red Sox and Tigers could overwhelm the poorer teams with offers of cash in large amounts. The Browns are the only un-rich team in either major league.

THE NATS SHOWED a profit with an eighth-place club last season. They're aware that even a fifth-place team in Washington would net them more money than they could possibly gain from player sales. In these days of fat attendance, the place to make the money is at the turnstiles, and every club is in the market for players who can bring the fans in.

As I was saying, the Browns are the exception, and Exhibit No. One in the futility of selling players for cash. They netted more than $400,000 the past two years by selling off their few stars, and the fan-reaction was immediate. The Browns drew only 275,000 at home last season, and again are being forced to sell players to tide the franchise over another year.

So they're offering their two good infielders, Bob Dillinger and Gerry Priddy, for sale at $200,000 each. One of them probably will be bought, Dillinger by Cleveland or Priddy by Detroit. The Browns will have cash in the bank, and precious little with which to lure the customers, and next year they'll be forced to sell again, and after that they're bound to run out of salable ball players.

IT'S PRETTY significant that perhaps the richest club in either big league, the Chicago Cubs of Phil K. Wrigley, were in eighth place all of last season. Mr. Wrigley's millions couldn't buy him a good ball team, despite his willingness to spend some of them. The Red Sox plainly attempted to buy the pennant two seasons ago by spending $200,000 for the Browns' Vern Stephens, and finished second. Hefty price tags are no guarantee, anyway. The Yankees gave the Browns $100,000 last winter for Fred Sanford, who proved the flop of their pitching staff.

Mr. Walter O. Briggs, sr., with probably more money to spend than other American League owner, and willing, like Wrigley, to spend it, has been unable to provide his Tigers with an adequate second baseman during the last five years. For lack, also, of a first baseman, the Tigers have rarely been a pennant factor over that span.

Only the minor league clubs, aside from the Browns, are receptive to cash offers, and their ranks are dwindling what with many being owned directly by major league teams. The independent minors who sell off their talent are not subject to the same fan criticism, with the customers happy to see the home-town stars get their chance in the big leagues. And in the minors, year-end player sales represent the margin of profit on the season's operation, as a rule.

HANK GREENBERG, attending the current meetings of the minor leagues in the new role of general manager of the Indians, was weary of the lobby-pounding at the end of the first day. "Hardest infield I ever played on," he moaned as he sank into a chair to rest his barking dogs.

A novitiate approached Greenberg and asked casually, "Were you a left-handed hitter, Hank?" A quick smile spread across Hank's face at that question, and he said, "No, I wish I were." He was leaving no doubt of his conviction that the left-handed hitters had all the best of it, with a quick start toward first base, more right-handed pitchers to hit against, and shorter fences to shoot at.

Hank cleared up one other item, too, when he confessed, "Yes, and I was a guess hitter, also. Darn right I was trying to guess, and anybody who tells you he isn't a guess hitter up there most of the time, is lying."

Zaslofsky Leads Stags' 75-55 Win Over Caps

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Dec. 6.—Grabbing an early lead and holding it all the way, the Chicago Stags trounced the Washington Caps in the stadium, tonight, 75 to 55.

The defeat, the second in a row for the Caps on the road, brought their Eastern Division NBA record to eight victories against a like number of defeats, their lowest mark of the season.

The Stags, leading the Central Division, have a 13-won, 5-lost record. Max Zaslofsky led the scoring with 18 points.

With Max Zaslofsky leading the surge, the Stags pulled away to a 28-12 first-quarter lead. The Caps, led by an 11-point rally by Freddie Scolari, trimmed the Stag margin to 11 points late in the second quarter, but Chuck Grabowski sank a free throw just at the whistle to give the Stags a 43-31 half-time lead.

Whatever chance the Caps had of overtaking the Central Division leaders they lost in the third period when the Stags moved into a 20-point advantage, thanks to Zaslofsky and Grabowski. Norlander rallied the Washingtonians briefly with two baskets, but Chicago had a comfortable 58-43 margin as the last quarter started.

The Caps scored 22 points in the final 12-minute frame, against 17 for Chicago, but the torrid Stag third period was too much for them to overcome.

Indianapolis Beats Celtics by 93-82

Indianapolis, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Indianapolis Olympians increased their margin in each quarter as they beat the Boston Celtics in a National Basketball Association game tonight, 93-82.

Bob Kinney of Boston outscored Alex Groza in a duel of centers, 24 to 22. Gene Englund, playing his first game after joining Boston here today, scored 14 points. Ralph Beard, Indianapolis longshot expert, hit nine of his specialties.

Caps Cut Squad To 11 Limit By Selling Schulz

The Washington Caps pared their squad to the 11-man National Basketball Association limit, and reunited a player with his 1948 coach, yesterday by selling Dick Schulz to the Tri-City Blackhawks of the western division.

Schulz will join Red Auerbach, last year's coach of the Caps, with the Blackhawks. He came to Washington at the beginning of the 1948-49 season in a trade that sent Irv Torgoff to Baltimore.

The Caps, under Player-Coach Bob Feerick, expected to continue their season with an extra man until Auerbach made a bid for the six-two former Wisconsin star.

Saddler Decisions Zuleta for Title

Cleveland, Dec. 6 (AP).—Former Featherweight Champion Sandy Saddler tonight won the junior lightweight boxing title by taking a split decision from Orlando Zuleta of Havana, Cuba.

The 10-round fight was a dull affair most of the way, with customers stamping and jeering.

Fairfax Beats Herndon In Opener, 35-29

Fairfax High's Rebels, winner of only one basketball game last year, captured their 1949-50 opener last night, 35-29, over Herndon High at Fairfax.

Jim Alger led the Rebels with nine points, but scoring honors for the game went to Herndon's Ronnie Coleman with 16.

Stirnweiss, Niarhos and Kryhoski in Trade Talk

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Dec. 6.—The name of Eddie Robinson, Washington first baseman, took new prominence today in trade talk by the Nats amid indications of an in-the-wind deal with the New York Yankees.

Robinson would go to the Yankees on the basis of a four-for-one swap that would bring Second Baseman George Stirnweiss, First Baseman Dick Kryhoski, Catcher Gus Niarhos and Pitcher Don Johnson to the Nats.

Vice President Calvin Griffith of the Nats was in session late today with General Manager George Weiss of the Yankees. Griffith said, "There will be no deal made before tomorrow, but we are getting close."

Billy Evans, general manager of the Tigers, is awaiting the completion or collapse of the Nats' negotiations with the Yankees before renewing his own bid for Robinson. The White Sox are also interested in the big first baseman, but unlike the Yankees, those two clubs are shy of trading material.

Scarborough Not in It

President Clark Griffith, who returned to Washington tonight, declared flatly that Pitcher Ray Scarborough, another much-sought Nat, did not figure in any of the negotiations.

The 30-year-old Stirnweiss, crowded out of his second-base job with the Yankees by Rookie Gerry Coleman, has long been sought by the Nats to bolster their second-base position. He hit only .267 last season, but is a former league batting champion and valued by Manager Bucky Harris for his double play-making ability.

Holding out for a first baseman in exchange in any deal involving Robinson, the Nats are said to have been given their choice of any of three Yankee-owned first sackers, Kryhoski, Joe Collins and Fenton Mole. Kryhoski, 6-foot-2 left-handed hitter and fielder, hit .328 for Portland in the Coast League after being farmed out by the Yankees last July.

Like Stirnweiss, Catcher Gus Niarhos is also Yankee surplus. The 165-pound Niarhos lost his catching job to Yogi Berra and Charley Silvera last season for lack of hitting. In his first year with the Yanks in 1948, he was impressive as a clever backstop.

Won 8 and Lost 14

The fourth Yankee mentioned in the deal, Don Johnson, played for Bucky Harris in 1948 when the Nats' manager piloted the Yanks. A hefty 23-year-old left-hander, he was on the Yanks' Sacramento farm team last season, winning only eight and losing 14 in the Coast League.

Robinson, the Nats' top hitter last season with his .294 average, 18 homers and 76 runs batted in, was acquired a year ago from the Cleveland Indians in the Mickey Vernon deal.

The Nats were negotiating on three fronts today, with Calvin Griffith in session with the Yankees, Harris talking to Manager Jack Onslow of the White Sox and President Clark Griffith in discussion with Detroit General Manager Billy Evans.

Harris renewed his attempts to acquire Second Baseman Cass Michaels from the Sox, but Onslow countered with a demand for both Robinson and Pitcher Dick Weik. Prospects of a deal considerably dimmed, but the talks will continue tomorrow.

Brawley Gets 25, But Terps Lose, 66 to 56

Charlottesville, Dec. 6.—Despite the 25-point performance of Sophomore Lee Brawley, Maryland's Terrapins lost a 66-56 decision to the University of Virginia here tonight.

It was Maryland's third straight loss, and Virginia's third straight win.

Maryland and Virginia played on even terms in the early stages, but just before intermission, Cavalier Frank Allen put his team in front with two set shots and a foul goal. Virginia led at half-time, 32-26.

Joe Noertker, who led Virginia with 23 points, got three straight layups midway in the second half, and gave the Cavaliers a 41-34 bulge. George Diffie and Brawley countered with set shots to cut the Terp deficit to 41-38, and that was the closest Maryland came.

American U. Plays Hoyas In Bid for Area Recognition

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The scorned Eagles of American University finally get their big chance for area basketball recognition tonight when they meet Georgetown's Hoyas 8:45 at Uline Arena.

It's the first time in six years that the Eagles have succeeded in booking a game with a member of Washington exclusive big three—Georgetown, Maryland and George Washington.

The three larger schools have sidestepped the Eagles' overtures for that long, claiming usually that conflicts in schedule barred the way.

Georgetown found room on the schedule this season, however, and G. W. and Maryland will have to follow suit next year if the Eagles give the Hoyas a good fight tonight.

The Eagles have the manpower and the height. They won their first two games, over the Quantico Marines, 67-50, and Brooklyn Poly, 62-41.

A "Beat Georgetown" sign covered the statue of Revolutionary Gen. Artemus Ward in busy Ward Circle yesterday morning until the police took it down. And last night, a bonfire rally was held outside the school gymnasium.

Some of the lads whom the Hoyas must stop tonight are Bob Lamon, stylish set shot artist; Leroy Ishman and Ronnie Garshag, long and limber hook shot aces; Ed Moffatt, hard-driving layup shooter, and Packy Morris, the team's ball handler.

Georgetown, 73-46 victor over Catholic U. in its opener, will lead with Frank Alagia, Dick Falvey, John Mazziotta, Johnny Norris, Tommy O'Keefe and John Brown. Mazziotta and Norris stand 6-feet-5, and the others are more than 6 feet tall.

The Georgetown and American freshmen teams will meet in a 7 p. m. preliminary.

On other fronts, Navy opens its season against little Penn Military College this afternoon in Annapolis, and Quantico's Marines, even in four games this season, visit Syracuse University tonight.

This Is Unfair To Court Refs

Salem, Oreg., Dec. 6 (AP).—Fans fed up with whistle-tooting at basketball games will be amazed at the contest here Saturday night.

There won't be a whistle. There won't even be a referee to give a toot.

It will be an experiment between the First Christian and First Presbyterian teams in a church league. They call it the honor system.

If a player believes he has fouled an opponent, he will sing out, "foul," and the opponent will go to the free-throw line. But under no circumstances can anyone else call a foul.

Commission Asks Ike to Explain 'Fix'

Philadelphia, Dec. 6 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Athletic Commission today called Ike Williams on the carpet to give an official account of his story of a "fix" attempt in his title fight with Freddy Dawson.

Commission Chairman George Jones said his agency wants to know why the lightweight champion suspected he might be robbed of his title.

As it turned out, Williams wasn't robbed of his title. He defeated Chicago's Dawson in a 15-round decision bout at Convention Hall last night.

In an unprecedented news conference summoned shortly before the fight, Williams said a telephone informant told him a "fix" was on and that if the bout went the distance, Dawson would win.

Williams wouldn't say who made the call.

He did say, though, that if Dawson won a decision he would have "plenty to tell." After the bout he said he must have been given "a bum steer."

Graziano Gets Nod Over Horne

Cleveland, Dec. 6 (AP).—Former middleweight champion Rocky Graziano of New York won a unanimous 10-round decision tonight from George (Sonny) Horne. Horne looked his best in the final rounds. A record crowd of 14,202 watched the arena card.

Career Ends at 33

Yanks, Preparing for Deals, Release Keller to Make Room

Baltimore, Dec. 6 (AP).—The New York Yankees cleared the decks for a trade today by releasing Charlie (King Kong) Keller, an old stadium standby.

The faded veteran, plagued by a chronic back ailment, was forced to call it a career at the age of 33 when he accepted his unconditional release after a conference with General Manager George Weiss.

Once a member of one of baseball's greatest all-around outfields with Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich, Keller bows out of the Yankee picture after 10 years of valorous service. The Maryland strong boy with a lifetime record of 184 home runs, was a member of six Yankee pennant clubs and appeared in three All-Star games.

It was evident last summer that Keller was near the end of the trail. One of the best liked Yankees, Charlie simply lacked that old power.

Keller never was the same after suffering a back injury in 1947 although he gamely tried to make a comeback. He even went down to Newark in the International League for a few weeks.

With Keller definitely out of the picture, Manager Casey Stengel would like to move Tommy Henrich back to the outfield from first base. That would go a long way toward solving his outfield problem—if Casey can have a problem after last year's pennant and World Series success.

Keller, a veteran of more than a decade in the majors, never has played for anyone except the Yankees. He joined the Newark Bears of the International League upon graduation from the University of Maryland and moved up to New York two years later.

The native of Frederick, Md., told Weiss he has no definite plans for the future. Keller now has a farm outside Frederick.

Minors Set Record, Draft 218 Players for $439,000

Baltimore, Dec. 6 (AP).—The first open minor league draft meeting set a record when a total of 218 baseball players were selected for $439,850. The previous high was set last year when the draft was conducted by mail and telegram. In 1948 the minors paid $349,500 for 195 players.

Fourth in Series, 'Tennis Is My Racquet'

Bobby Gets Backing of Fans

BY BOBBY RIGGS
Former World's Tennis Champion

AFTER I had been dropped by the Davis Cup Committee, I entered the Southern California men's singles championships, and shellacked Frank Shields in the final.

Some of my friends at the Los Angeles Tennis Club were glad to see me playing so well. And they weren't any happier than I was about the treatment I was getting from the big shots.

Bobby Riggs

By way of making up for it, they got together and established a fund to pay my expenses to Wimbledon for the All-England championships.

They knew the U. S. L. T. A. wouldn't send anyone who wasn't on the Davis Cup team. They also knew the association wouldn't give them any medals for sending me on my own, but that didn't bother them a bit.

At least I'd get a chance at Wimbledon to prove I could beat the men who'd been chosen over my head.

Perry Jones astonished me by telling me, "I swear I'll make those fellows back East give you another chance. I'll recommend strongly that they take you back on the team!"

ABOUT 10 days before I was supposed to leave for England, Mr. Jones got another telegram from New York. Walter L. Pate, the nonplaying captain of America's Davis Cup teams, wanted me to join the cup squad at Forest Hills, where the boys were practicing for the challenge round matches against Australia.

I returned the "Riggs-to-Wimbledon Fund" and trotted off to the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills, N. Y.

The day I reported to Mr. Pate at Forest Hills I was told, "You're playing Parker this afternoon." Just like that.

I felt pretty proud of myself when I beat Frankie in a couple of sets. I figured that was my first step toward "showing them." Next day I played Grant, and he beat me.

AFTER my match with Grant, Mr. Pate spoke to me.

"It's nice to have you back here," he said. "It will be good experience for you to play with men like Parker and Grant, and you'll be able to give them some good practice."

"Practice?" I asked him. "What do you mean. I should think I'd have a good chance of winning that second singles

Globetrotters Romp, 51 to 36

The Harlem Globetrotters won the fortieth straight game on their Nation-wide basketball exhibition tour by easily beating the Philadelphia Sphas, 51-36, last night in the feature game of a triple-header at Uline Arena.

A crowd of 4177 was on hand. In the two other games, the New York Celtics nosed out the Clark Twins, 62-59, and the Northwest House edged out the D. C. Skaters, 30-28.

Led by Reece (Goose) Tatum, the Globetrotters zoomed into a 43-12 halftime lead, and then passed rings around the Sphas while letting them score in the second half. Tatum scored 23 points.

Leamour's Last Jump Beats Butler in Charles Town Feature

Bill Bennings . . .

AT CHARLESTOWN:

DEAR FOLKS: Looks as if the Benningites might get the Christmas money. Among other winners we had the daily double on the Tuesday program. A jockey and a trainer argued after the running of a race in which their horse finished second. "Didn't you see me save all that ground coming into the stretch turn?" shouted the rider. "Yes, you saved a lot of ground," replied the trainer. "But I can't put that ground in the bank, can I?" Look for Charles Town to oppose Havre de Grace again next spring. Mrs. J. B. Bond has sold Yes She Will to Mrs. E. L. Price. Four prominent racing secretaries are serving here in official capacities. They are: Fred Burton, John P. Turner, sr., John P. Turner, jr., and Gil Haus. See you on the rail—BILL.

Jimmy Cooper Meets Puerto Rican Monday

Taking over the spotlight at Joe Turner's Arena next Monday night will be two hard-hitting featherweights, when Gabe Menendez will headline the local fistic ace, Jimmy Cooper, and Philburto Osario, Puerto Rican star, in a 10-round bout.

Downs Rides Clever Race On Winner

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 6.—A picture and a magnifying glass were used to determine H. G. Bedwell's Leamour as the winner over J. H. Hammond's Butler after the thrilling finish of the Columbia Purse featuring the Tuesday program here. A neck farther back came C. L. Creswell's Blue Holly to be third.

Leamour, a star here last fall but winner of only one race in 24 starts as she went postward today, came from far back to be a going-away victor. Butler and Blue Holly drew almost equal backing and Leamour paid a $6.20 mutuel in the field of six.

Strongly handled by Willie Downs when the real racing began, Leamour was clocked in 1.50 4/5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

Butler, Blue Holly and Sun Ember dominated the early running while Downs sat tight and saved ground with Leamour. Along the back stretch Downs took Leamour to the outside and the filly started the move that was to end with the main money.

Leamous clicked off rivals steadily and just as it appeared that Butler was going to last, Leamour seemed to find new punch and bounded up right at the wire. Blue Holly held on gamely for the show.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo, who seldom rides during the late fall meeting here, showed one of his best saddle performances in the sixth event, the day's secondary feature. He won with Mrs. J. B. Hatfield's Paint and Powder, coming home ahead of Mrs. J. M. Lingle's Cinder Foot and H. M. Simpson's Certified.

Several horses took shots at Paint and Powder and Certified finally took the lead. However, the colt bore out at the final turn and Palumbo kept driving hard to account for a daylight victory. Backers of the daughter of Dauber collected at the rate of $13.80 for the usual $2 investment.

Palumbo also had a hand in the $18.60 daily double on the 5 and 1 combination. He put up another splendid ride to get R. N. Boerner's Quick News home at $6.80 in the second race. Carty Meyerhoffer accounted for the first race with Justin Funkhouser's Gilded Fox, a $5 choice.

Our Bill Bennings Picks 7 of 8 Winners

If Sign Egret hadn't been scratched in yesterday's fifth race at Charles Town, The Washington Post's Bill Bennings might have had a perfect day. As it was, Bill picked no less than seven winners in eight races—a perfect enough day for any race track handicapper.

His all but unbeatble predictions included the $18.60 daily double and the $14.40 winner of the eighth, Marion Clarke.

Local AAU Heads Attend Convention

A delegation comprised of Eddie Rosenblum, president of the District of Columbia AAU; Jo Bertolini, E. Joseph Aronoff and Bob Thurston left by plane yesterday afternoon for San Francisco, where they will represent the Capital at the national AAU convention being staged in that city tomorrow through Sunday.

The Washington group will extend an official invitation to the convention to meet here next year as a part of the Sesquicentennial celebration. Dates of the 1950 convention are December 6-10 and that meeting will arrange to send American teams to the 1951 Pan-American games in Buenos Aires.

Langdon and Southwest Meet in Playoff Game

Langdon's Eastern division champion Lions will be out to repeat an early-season victory over Western division titlist Southwest Merchants when they meet in a playoff for the Metropolitan Amateur Football League's 160-pound championship at Gonzaga Field Sunday at 2 p. m.

The Lions upset Southwest in the opening game on the 1949 schedule, 6-0, and won seven in a row before losing the final game to Brookland Merchants.

VMI, VPI, Citadel Seek Broader Financial-Aid-to-Athletes Code

Schools Join Virginia in NCAA Plea

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

VMI, The Citadel and VPI, along with Virginia, have peculiar situations and will petition the NCAA to amend its financial-aid-to-athletes code to enable them to comply.

Virginia has stated it is unable to meet the requirement which states that athletes who do not have full schalorships must work for room and board. The Cavaliers can't meet the law because there are no campus jobs available.

Virginia Military Institute, The Citadel and Virginia Polytechnic Institute are unable to abide by the code for a different reason—their athletes do not have time from their military and academic studies to work, even if there were campus jobs available.

"None of the cadets—athletes or nonathletes—work on campus jobs at our school," said Frank Summers, athletic director at V. M. I. last night. "There isn't time.

"Classes aren't dismissed until 4 p. m. daily and after that there are drills, parade and retreat. We dismiss our football players from the drills three days a week to permit them to practice football for an hour and a half.

"As you can see, there isn't time in the daily routine of a cadet at V. M. I. to work at a campus job. His time is all taken up. If they (the NCAA) want to kick us out, I guess they'll have to go ahead and do it. We'll still play no matter what happens. There will always be other schools we can play who are in the same boat with us."

V. P. I. and The Citadel, military schools like V. M. I., have similar situations. They have either been cited by the NCAA or admitted their inability to comply with the code, but no finger has been pointed at other service schools like Army and Navy.

Athletes at Army and Navy enjoy no different scholarships than the nonathlete. They receive room, board and tuition as well as $78 monthly.

They are not required to work at campus jobs because the NCAA recognizes the Government subsidy that each cadet or midshipman receives.

V. M. I., The Citadel, V. P. I. and Virginia have peculiar situations also and hope that the NCAA will take these unusual circumstances into consideration at its next meeting in January.

Look, NCAA, They've Won Only 5 Games

It's the little fellow who pays. V.M.I., The Citadel and V.P.I., who have either admitted or been cited by the NCAA for failure to comply with the purity code, won only five games among them in the 1949 season.

Maine Chance Pays $29,400 for Filly

Newmarket, England, Dec. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Elizabeth Graham's Maine Chance Farm paid $29,400 today for a classy two-year-old filly, Pagen Worship, at the Newmarket thoroughbred sales.

The filly, by Hyperion-Participation, will be shipped to the United States.

Col. Nog says:

Overbrook's 1st name in egg nog!

It takes the Master's touch to make the finest eggnog. That's why Overbrook's . . . made by Eggnog Specialists for 25 years . . . is America's finest. It's the Master's blend with a rare, full-body flavor that's proof in every drop of the genius of those eggnog makers of Maryland.

Richer! Creamier! Smoother! Overbrook's comes freshly bottled — a great blend of brandy, blended whiskey, rum, and pure, rich, fresh dairy products.

spot. After all, I'm ranked No. 4 in the country, and I think I'm a lot better than I was last year."

Mr. Pate said, "I'm sorry, Bobby, but you're just here to play practice matches with the cup team. You won't be considered for the squad."

I guess I blew my top. And why not? That was the payoff. My Los Angeles friends had taken back the money they were going to use to send me to Wimbledon, and here I was, holding a big brown paper bag.

I don't think I've ever been so mad in my life.

HOWEVER, I didn't see any point in sulking forever. I wrote to my brother John in Los Angeles and asked him to drive my car to New York and take a swing around the tournaments with me. John was glad to come and we had a swell trip.

We drove to Hartford, Conn., for the New England championships. I won, beating Walter Senior in a five-set final.

Then we went to Nashville, where I won the Southern championships.

In the beautiful little town of Neenah, Wis., I played in the Fox River Valley championships. Hugh Strange of Neenah offered us some very interesting expense accounts. I got $300 for a week of tennis, which isn't bad—for an amateur.

The tournament committee provided fine accommodations, too, so my $300 was all gravy. I didn't have to spend a dime of it.

Irish Name All-Opponent

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 6 (AP).—The Notre Dame football squad today picked its all-opponent team, naming four Michigan State players and two from Southern Methodist.

The Irish voted Southern Methodist as the best team they met this season and named Kyle Rote, SMU back, as their only unanimous selection on the all-opponent eleven.

The team with the number of votes each player received:

Ends—Art Weiner, North Carolina (33) and Jack Dittmer, Iowa (14).
Tackles—Don Coleman, Michigan State (28) and Neal Franklin, Southern Methodist (17).
Guards—Ed Bagdon, Michigan State (35) and Don Mason, Michigan State (19).
Center—Joe Nickirk, North Carolina (10).
Quarterback—Nick Sebek, Indiana (22).
Backs—Kyle Rote, Southern Methodist (36), Lynn Chandnois, Michigan State (34), and John Kerestes, Purdue (11).
Jerry Paske, Iowa back, was just edged by Kerestes.

Georgia Court Has No Pity for 'Beaned' Spectator

Atlanta, Dec. 6 (AP).—Baseball fans must take their own chances of getting beaned by a wild ball, the Georgia Court of Appeals ruled today.

The court tossed out a $5000 damage suit brought by R. M. Hunt against the Thomasville (Ga.) Baseball Co.

Said the court: "Where a person wishing to witness a professional baseball game purchases a ticket or chooses or accepts a seat in a portion of the grandstand which is unprotected, he voluntarily assumes the risk inherent in such a portion."

Anacostia Sailors Win, 62-58, Over O'Brien's

Gene Amburgey's 13 points paced Anacostia Naval Receiving Station to a 62-58 victory over O'Brien's last night at Anacostia. High scoring honors for the losers were shared by Eilmer Leukhardt and George Catloth, each with 18 points.

Teachers Shift

The Wilson Teachers College-Maryland State Teachers basketball game, scheduled to be played Thursday night at 8 o'clock, will be played at the American University gymnasium instead of Jefferson High as was previous announced.

Mikan, Groza In Point Race

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—George Mikan of the Minneapolis Lakers is making a spirited bid to overhaul Indianapolis' Alex Groza in the National Basketball Association's scoring derby.

Groza, the leader, has scored 468 points in 19 games. In three less contests, Mikan has tallied 434 points, N. B. A. statistics disclosed today.

The 6-foot 7-inch Groza has rimmed the most field goals, 160, and the most fouls, 148. But Mikan boasted the best average, 27.1. Groza's average was 24.6.

Joe Fulks of Philadelphia, with 311 points, placed third in the scoring. Waterloo's Dick Mehen was fourth with 270 points, while Groza's teammate, Ralph Beard, was fifth with 268.

Gorgeous George To be Wafted Into Turner's Tonight

That tender scent at Turner's Arena tonight will be provided by Gorgeous George, the oversized hairdresser's model, who will headline the evening's wrestling show in a meeting with plain Joe Corbett.

Very little wrestling will be anticipated by spectators, but there'll be enough foolishness to satisfy all. George, as he's called by the crude, will wear a robe he claims cost $1500 into the ring; his butler, Jeeves, will spray everything with perfume; then Corbett will spend some 15 minutes trying to muss up the gorgeous one's platinum curls.

In a switch from the ridiculous to the slightly less ridiculous, Natie Brown meets Sammy Menaker, Marvin Mercer meets Pedro Ortega, George Bruckman meets Jim Austeri and Al Calza meets Wally Dern in other exhibitions.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

FHA Will Expand Its 66 Field Offices Before January 1

Federal Housing is expanding its 66 field offices. Three hundred employes will be hired before January 1 and another 30 before next June 30. The headquarters office here will hire only to fill vacancies.

A new law approved by Congress gave FHA the authority to use up to 35 percent of last year's income to finance its field operations. FHA is one of the Government's biggest money-makers. The recent law permits it to adjust field employment to meet changing business conditions.

PUBLIC HEALTH: A long-range study is being made of its officer corps. Federal Security officials want to be sure that the corps represents the best available career system of PHS doctors and other employes. There have been suggestions that the corps should be more closely integrated with the Civil Service career system. The study will take months.

STATE: The PHS problem is similar to that of the State Department. Secretary of State Acheson favors a merger of the Foreign Service and departmental personnel. But how to do it? That's the problem. The latest proposal is to set up a three-man committee made up of a Civil Service expert, a Foreign Service official, and an impartial outsider to recommend the consolidation.

MARITIME: About 74 employes here in its accounts and finance division have been handed a bitter Christmas "present." On December 26, they either will be fired or demoted.

In the group are employes with more than 30 years of service. Most of them are career people. Maritime officials say they hated to make the cutback because it will work real hardships on many individuals, but their budget compels a reduction to be made.

STORY: An occupational hazard of a letter carrier is that of being bitten by dogs. But the Postoffice Department has its first case where a letter carrier was attacked, clawed and bitten by a cat. It happened in El Paso, Tex.

POSTAL LONGEVITY: It's a sure bet that the Congress will be asked to clarify it next month.

Nevertheless, the decisions rendered on the recent law by the General Accounting Office were on the liberal side and they followed along the Postoffice's own interpretations which appeared here several weeks ago. Intervening military service, for example, will count toward the promotions.

Postal unions have two points which they will ask Congress to clear up: (1) To allow rural carrier service before July 1, 1945, to count toward the longevity raises; and (2) to allow employes who have had breaks in service to count all of their time toward the above-the-grade increases.

In addition, postal groups will seek to have the duties of postal employes defined by Congress. They are protesting a recent department order which assigned additional work to the lower-paid mail handlers. The unions contend these are the functions of the clerks and carriers.

LOOK-SEE: The Administration is making an independent study into charges of abuses of GI benefits. If the survey turns up widespread abuses of the benefits, it's a safe bet that the President will recommend changes in the GI law. The inquiry isn't being made by the Veterans Administration.

STATE: Byron Price is reported to have been offered the post of Assistant Secretary of State in charge of public affairs to succeed George Allen.

Price is Deputy Director General of United Nations in charge of administration. He headed the successful Office of Censorship here during the war and he was formerly a top official of the Associated Press. If he accepts, Price would have charge of the Voice of America and other programs.

NOTES: Walter R. Macatee has been assigned by Civil Aeronautics to encourage the development of highways between cities and airports to reduce ground travel time . . . Dr. George G. Brown of Michigan University has been named director of Atomic Energy's engineering division . . . Public Housing Administration has set up a regional office in Boston. A dozen other new offices will be established as the new public housing program moves into high gear. PHA had to abolish its regional offices about 18 months ago because of a sharp reduction in its budget by Congress.

More School Crowding Is Threatened In Arlington

Principals Report Enrolling of 800 New Pupils Will Jam 34 Buildings

Principals of Arlington's 34 schools told the Arlington School Board last night that the system faces increased overcrowding this February because of the registration of an estimated 800 first-grade pupils.

The special meeting, in the Thomas Jefferson Junior High School, was told that pupils from severely overcrowded schools might be sent to the Yorktown School, Yorktown blvd. and Greenbriar st., and the Glencarly School, due to open in February.

The principals said a "preliminary" registration of first-graders produced 639 youngsters.

Falls Church Pupils Facing Part-Time

Second-graders in Madison-Jefferson and Oak Street Elementary Schools, Falls Church, may go on a half-day basis soon, it was learned yesterday.

School officials of Falls Church and Fairfax County are trying to work out an agreement which will place Madison-Jefferson second graders on double shifts, and send pupils living in the Westlawn development to Oak Street—necessitating a double shift there.

Falls Church school system operates Madison-Jefferson. Oak Street School is under Fairfax County jurisdiction. First graders at both schools have been on half-day schedules since early fall.

Growing Enrollments

According to Irvin Schmitt and W. T. Woodson, the superintendents of Falls Church and Fairfax County schools, rapidly increasing enrollments at Madison-Jefferson require the double shift there.

As a result, children living in Westlawn—a short distance south of Falls Church on Lee blvd. in the county—will be sent to Oak Street, instead of the closer Madison-Jefferson, under the proposal of Falls Church officials.

The county is being asked to place Oak Street second graders on the double shift as part of the agreement, according to Dr. Joseph W. Seay, vice chairman of the Falls Church School Board. "We feel that's fair." Agreement has not yet been reached, he said.

'Getting Critical'

Dr. Seay reported that about 86 second graders now attend Madison-Jefferson. Superintendent Schmitt said the situation is now "getting critical." The average number of pupils is 40 or more to a class, he pointed out. He compared a high of 44 in one second grade classroom to an average class of 39 or under in other grades.

Similar half-day sessions may be in store in the future for children of other grades, Dr. Seay said.

"It depends on whether the population continues to grow." He explained that the Westlawn subdivision, opened in July, was a compelling factor in causing first graders to go on double shifts.

Fairfax Board Acts

Meantime, the Fairfax County School Board moved yesterday to facilitate handling of information concerning the proposed 12 million dollar school construction program deemed necessary by the fall of 1951.

At its regular meeting the board passed a motion calling for hiring of additional personnel to draw up and pass on to the public data on the projected building program and proposed school bond issue.

The board also:

Approved interchange of teachers with Great Britain, Canada or France for the 1950-1951 school year.

Scheduled a discussion with the Prince William County School Board on the latter's proposal that Fairfax County sell seven acres it owns at the Manassas Regional High School in order to place a new Negro elementary school there.

In Colmar Manor

4 Children Left Hungry, Couple Held

The parents of four young children, whose home "looked like a pig sty," were held in Prince Georges County jail yesterday after the mother spent the last of her grocery money for beer.

Charged with contributing to the delinquency of minor children were Marvin E. Arthur, 33, who was arrested Monday night on a disorderly conduct charge in front of a Colmar Manor tavern, and his wife Martha, 28.

County Probation Officer Roy D. Bright said the Arthur home, 4306 Newark rd., "looked like a pig sty" when he went to investigate yesterday.

"I've had this job four years," he declared, "and this is the worst thing I've ever seen."

He quoted Mrs. Arthur as saying her sister had given her $3 Monday to buy food for the children, but that her husband "persuaded me to buy beer with the money."

Arthur, who has been unemployed for three months, was arrested by Lieut. E. H. Mulligan in front of a Bladensburg rd. tavern.

After Bright and several policemen took coal and groceries to the Arthur home, the children were fed and placed in a foster home by Mrs. Ora West of the county welfare board.

Mrs. Arthur was held in $100 bond, her husband in $1000 bond. They are scheduled to appear Thursday in Juvenile Court.

Bright said the Arthurs' four-room bungalow was "reeking" with the odor of stale beer when he investigated. There was neither food nor heat in the house. Beer cans were stacked in the kitchen sink, he added.

Mrs. Arthur told police her husband had given her $5 in the past six months for household expenses. "What could I do?" she was quoted as saying when arrested.

Lieutenant Mulligan went to the Arthur home Monday night after arresting the father. This is what he reported:

Mrs. Arthur "staggered" in the doorway and talked incoherently.

Four fully clothed children were in the house. Two boys, one 7 and the other 9, were asleep on a mattress on the bedroom floor. In the bed were a 3-year-old girl and a 16-month-old boy asleep. The daughter is in need of medical attention, Bright said.

Lieutenant Mulligan went out and returned with several scuttles of coal.

Bright and several police officers carried a "full load of groceries" to the house at 7 a. m. yesterday. The food was donated by the Dixie Pig restaurant and by Bright.

Cab Driver James D. Jewell's "test case" of the National Airport crackdown against fare pickups was continued in Alexandria yesterday by United States Commissioner Stanley King until 2 p. m. December 20.

Logan Hollowell of Washington, attorney for Jewell, was not recognized as legal counsel because he has not been associated with a member of the Federal Court bar for the Eastern District of Virginia. Hollowell said he would associate with a local attorney and meantime wanted more time to prepare the case.

Jewell, 41, of 726 N. Abingdon st., Arlington, faces a charge of violating airport regulations prohibiting fare pickups by unlicensed cabs. He was arrested by an airport policeman last Saturday.

Chain Bridge Rd. School Sale Is Authorized

The District Commissioners yesterday agreed to sell an abandoned public school and to seek funds to tear down another District-owned building.

Up for sale is the Chain Bridge Road School, built in 1923 for Negroes and abandoned in 1937 for lack of students. Located at 2810 Chain Bridge rd. nw. on half an acre of land, it is used for storage.

The building the city hopes to tear down next year is a garage on land acquired for the use of the Jefferson Recreation Center at 9th and I sts. nw., now used as a shop.

Aged Invalid Carried From Burning Home In Dramatic Rescue; Two Firemen Hurt

"SMOKE-EATERS'" FARE—Pvt. Robert Foley of Truck Company 3, overcome by smoke, is carried by comrades from the second floor of the house at 220 P st. nw., swept by fire yesterday. Foley is credited with finding Mrs. Anne Strong, 68, inside the smoke-filled upper story. Other firemen in smoke masks are bringing out Mrs. Strong (arrow)

Police Make Net, Other Residents Of P Street Home Jump to Safety

Two District firemen were injured and a partially paralyzed woman dramatically saved in a fire at 220 P st. nw. here yesterday.

Three persons were hospitalized after the blaze. Admitted to Casualty Hospital were two firemen. They are:

Pvt. Victor W. Wallett, 33, of 114 N. Park dr., Arlington, of Number 1 Truck Company, smoke injuries.

Pvt. Robert E. Foley, 23, of 804 Randolph st. ne., of No. 3 Truck Company, smoke injuries.

Mrs. Annie Strong, 70, partially paralyzed resident of a second-floor apartment in the building, smoke injuries.

All were expected to be released after treatment.

Mrs. Strong was dramatically rescued from her second floor apartment by Capt. J. A. Briscoe, 52, who climbed a ladder to a second floor porch and crawled through heat and smoke to the bedside of the woman.

Captain Briscoe, himself blinded by the smoke, said he set his path by the woman's moans. When he touched her, he said, he picked her up and with the aid of two other firemen got her down the ladder. Mrs. Strong was given oxygen on the scene before being removed to the hospital.

Captain Briscoe was also administered oxygen on the scene.

Before firemen arrived on the scene, several persons jumped from a second story porch into a net improvised by policemen who spread out one of their overcoats.

One of these was a 78-year-old woman, Mrs. Lillian Vaughn, who is an outpatient at Walter Reed General Hospital and suffers from heart disease and high blood pressure.

Fire department officials said they believed the fire started in the basement, apparently from an overheated furnace flue pipe. They said the fire ate out the cellar steps, burned out several joists, and ate holes in both the first and second floors. Damage was estimated at about $3000.

Wagstaff Gets 2-Year Term For Assault

Plea for Sanity Test Of Maryland's 'Bad Boy' Rejected by Judge

Joseph A. Wagstaff, 24, whose escapades have earned him the appellation "Chevy Chase bad boy," yesterday was sentenced to serve two years in the Maryland House of Correction on charges of assaulting a domestic with a paring knife.

In sentencing Wagstaff, Circuit Judge Charles W. Woodward, brushed aside a defense plea to delay the action pending psychiatric tests.

The jurist told Defense Attorney Thomas Ahern: "If you thought there was anything wrong with the defendant's mind, you ought to have brought it to the attention of the court before the trial."

Mentality Questioned

Ahern, apparently referring to two attempted jailbreaks by Wagstaff while incarcerated in the Montgomery County jail awaiting trial, said that he believed "these acts are not those of a normal person."

Woodward cut Ahern short, commenting: "You have not brought to the court's attention anything the defendant has done. You are just assuming that the court has knowledge of any acts . . ."

The sentence, passed by Woodward in the Montgomery County courthouse at Rockville, was identical with the sentence meted Wagstaff when he was first tried on the assaault charge in Bethesda Police Court last January 10.

Granted Jury Trial

Wagstaff appealed the police court sentence and automatically received a jury trial. It was upon the guilty verdict of the jury that the man was sentenced yesterday. His record shows a series of convictions ranging from assault with a deadly weapon to destruction of private property.

On Monday Wagstaff and two companions assaulted a 67-year-old jailer in an attempt to break out of the county jail.

An earlier break attempt failed last week with the arrest of two youths on charges of attempting to pass Wagstaff a milk container in which were a bottle of whisky and a half-dozen hacksaw blades.

Wagstaff, smartly garbed in a tan camel hair coat, and with his hands manacled, was driven to the House of Corrections at Jessups, accompanied by Sheriff Frank I. Davis and two deputies. Following in another car was Charles M. Orme, Montgomery County Police chief.

Unsealed Greetings Need 2c Stamp

Some of its best customers, the Postoffice Department reports sadly, still haven't learned that the rate on unsealed greeting cards is 2 cents now, not 1½ cents.

The unsealed-greeting rate went up at the last session of Congress.

Trial of Lano Threats Case Postponed

The trial of Sam Lano, Maryland slot-machine operator, on threats charges, in Prince Georges County Circuit Court, yesterday was postponed when Lano's two attorneys withdrew from the case.

The lawyers, Louis Lebowitz and Robert W. McCullough, told Judge John B. Gray, jr., that in discussing another case with a client they had come across certain information on behalf of Lano that they couldn't use since it involved a confidential client-lawyer relationship.

The other client, they said, is Mrs. John Duffy, wife of the man Lano is accused of having threatened.

The indictment charges that Lano "did threaten to accuse the said Duffy of a crime of an indictable nature, to wit, the crime of having obtained money under false pretenses."

Duffy is the proprietor of Duffy's Tavern at 4308 Rhode Island ave., just over the District line.

Gray then gave Lano a week to obtain new counsel and 10 days to decide if he wanted a jury trial.

On Monday Judge Charles C. Marbury rejected Lano's plea for a change of venue.

Silver Spring Lions Set Up 'Country Store'

The Silver Spring Lions Club has set up a branch of Jim Gibbons' WMAL "Country Store" in the showroom of the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board Building, 8500 Colesville rd., Silver Spring.

The "store" will collect food for needy families throughout the metropolitan Washington area, including sections of Maryland and Virginia.

Penalizing of Juror Scored By Judge, But Firm Explains

Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday gave a piece of his mind to firms which penalize employes who serve on juries.

However, the District Court jurist acknowledged later that the incident which aroused his ire may have been the result of a misunderstanding.

A prospective juror, Alden Parrish, 116 36th st. ne., offered in court a letter from his employer, the Marenka Metal Manufacturing Co. The letter as read in court said Barrett was shop supervisor for the company, and added: "This position requires Mr. Barrett's continued presence in the shop at all times, and we would be forced to drop him from the payroll and train a new employe to take his place."

Addressing Barrett, Judge Holtzoff said:

"I am going to excuse you because I don't want you to lose your job. But I think we will make a record of the fact that the Marenka Manufacturing Co., of 628 W st. ne., is not a public-spirited concern, and the head of that concern is not performing his duty as a good citizen should."

Told of this by a reporter, Stephen Marenka, head of the concern, said that he had no intention of firing Barrett.

"Mr. Barrett works by the hour," Marenka said. He would be dropped from the payroll only during his term as a juryman. He needs the money from his job, and couldn't get along on the little a juryman gets, what with Christmas coming."

When told of Marenka's reply, Judge Holtzoff said, "If that's what he meant, it's all right. I guess his letter could be interpreted that way."

Gaming Case Hearings Off Until Feb. 27

Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday continued until February 27 extradition proceedings against William (Snags) Lewis and 11 others wanted on gambling charges in Prince Georges County.

The continuance was granted in District Court at the Government's request and in accordance with an agreement between District and Maryland authorities.

Those who face extradition are: Lewis, Ralph Spottswood, Ellis Solet, Gregory Seger, Lonnie Black, George P. Scott, Edward L. Hinkle, jr., Sterling D. Welch, Fred Sutton, Philip Samakow, Helen Danhankle and Madeline Mae Cooley.

With the exception of Samakow and the two women, they were among 14 who stood trial in the District during November, charged with operating a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate from 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md. The case ended in a hung jury and is scheduled to be retried February 2.

Maryland authorities have agreed not to press extradition until the District charges are disposed of.

Prince Georges Strikes 5000 Voters From Election Books

Approximately 5000 voters will be stricken from the election books of Prince Georges County for having failed to vote in the past five years.

The action was ordered yesterday by the board of election supervisors in compliance with State law. Approximately 11,000 were stricken from the books last year.

Those taken from the books will be sent a notice to the address shown on the registration books. They will have to register again just as though they are new voters.

The board voted to reply to a letter received from the League of Women Voters of the county criticizing recent actions.

The board acknowledged amending a ruling on residence to permit those who will be in the county 12 months at the time of the 1950 general election to register. The board said Frank Hall, board counsel, said the change was legal.

The board pointed out that many states permit voting by mail in defending its insistence that persons moving from other states show that they are no longer registered at their former residences.

New voters can register at the courthouse in Upper Marlboro daily from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. from Monday to Friday. The board plans to provide a special registration board to sit in the Hyattsville County Service Building after the first of the year, the league was told. Three special registration days also will be held in 1950, the board informed the league.

D. C. Traffic School Will Be Continued

The Commissioners yesterday decided to continue next year the District Traffic School, which was set up two years ago to "educate" traffic violators and persons failing drivers' tests.

At the same time, they sent to the superintendent of police for study a recommendation of Traffic Inspector Arthur E. Miller that the scope of the school be enlarged.

As now set up, the school may receive students from Traffic Court, Board of Revocation and Restoration and the Permit Section of the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. Miller, who organized the school, suggested it also accept students from the Police Department's Juvenile Bureau and that voluntary students be admitted if there is room.

There is now no compulsion to attend. But the alternative may be a court fine or the loss of a driver's permit.

The six-hour course gives instruction in traffic regulations, accident causes and sound driving practices. Traffic Court judges may reduce or suspend sentences as they see fit if offenders enroll in the school.

More than 5400 persons have attended the school in the Municipal Center, Miller said. Classes average about 100 each.

Smith Heads Arlington Civic Group

The Arlington Civic Federation last night unanimously elected Acting President T. Oscar Smith, a member of the Columbia Pike Citizens Association, as its president for 1950.

Others elected at the Lyon Park Community House Meeting were:

Vice President Reed K. Pond of the Parkway Citizens Association and president of the Citizens Committee for School Improvement; treasurer, J. Earl Weatherly of the Country Club Grove Citizens Association, and members of the executive board; Ralph E. Arble of the New Arlington Citizens Association, Alan L. Dean of the Fairlington Civic Association, Mrs. Catherine T. Seeger of the Arlington Forest Citizens Association, Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson of the Organized Women Voters and William G. Watt of the Lyon Village Citizens Association.

The federation voted to ask the January session of the State General Assembly for legislation to permit a referendum on non-partisan elections for county board and school board posts. Party nominations, the group said, "discriminate" against Federal employes.

Parking Allowed On Ten Blocks Of Benning Rd.

Removal of streetcar tracks led yesterday to lifting of the parking ban from about 10 blocks of Benning rd. except during rush hours.

The Commissioners approved changes in parking regulations to permit parking from 16th st. ne., east to Oklahoma ave., except for part of the 1700 block, and from Anacostia ave. to the railroad viaduct near Minnesota ave. Parking previously had been prohibited at any time along most of this stretch.

The area between Oklahoma and Anacostia aves. is bordered by park land, and consists largely of bridges over Kingman Lake and the Anacostia River, and their approaches.

Dr. Samuel R. Haythorn

Pittsburgh, Dec. 6 (AP).—Dr. Samuel Reese Haythorn, 69, pathologist and a specialist in research on tuberculosis, silicosis and cancer, died today at Allegheny General Hospital.

He was director of the Singer Research Laboratory at the hospital, and former head of the Department of Pathology and Bacteriology at the University of Pittsburgh's School of Medicine.

Rector Boy Walks Again After Year

It was sunny, but there was a nip in the air yesterday as Michael Rector walked out on the sun porch of Casualty Hospital.

He walked—but with the aid of a "walker"—a two-bar rail device on wheels. As photographers took his picture, Mike lifted both hands from the walker bars, a smile on his face.

"Look," he said, "I can stand up by myself."

Mike has been walking around the corridors for about a week now, according to Dr. J. Rogers Young, chief surgeon at the hospital. Admitted to the hospital November 12, 1948, with burns covereing 70 percent of his body, Mike now has 60 percent of the injured body surface covered with permanent new skin. He faces about eight or ten more skin grafts, Dr. Young said, before he will be through with primary grafting, and will be released to go home.

Even then, some plastic work may be necessary, Dr. Young said, for which Mike will have to return.

The 4-year-old lad, who caught fire when his cowboy suit was ignited, is going to get home for Christmas, however, if only for a few hours.

Dr. Young said the hospital plans to send him home for the occasion in an ambulance. He said the local Optimist Club already is making arrangements to make young Mike's Christmas a merry one.

Michael is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Rector of 613 Elliott st. ne.

Two Suffer Face Hurts In Crash of Auto, Truck

Two persons were injured yesterday when the car in which they were riding collided with a dump truck at 5th and I sts. ne.

Mrs. Mary M. Carlin, 55, of 3756 McKinley st. nw., was admitted to Providence Hospital with facial injuries. Frank Tolson, 50, of 115½ 10th st. se., was treated at Casualty Hospital for face injuries.

Driver of the truck, William S. Webb, 25, of 305 50th st. se., escaped injury. Damage to the car was heavy, police said.

Vestal's Alibi Wins Acquittal In Robbery Trial

A District Court jury has found James O. Vestal, 26, of 1117 L st. nw., innocent of a robbery charge.

Vestal had been accused in connection with the holdup July 14 of Mike Xanthos, a waiter, of 1312 Euclid ave. nw.

The bandit, who wore a black nylon stocking over his face and who was further disguised by a large artificial nose, had first called Xanthos on the telephone telling him to wait for a Western Union messenger who would arrive with a wire.

Later, the bandit appeared, jammed a gun in the waiter's ribs and fled with $1000.

At the trial, Defense Attorneys Jesse H. Chessin and Jacob Gordon presented evidence to show Vestal was elsewhere at the time of the holdup. The jury deliberated for three hours.

Navy Seeks Bids On 98 Items—Autos To Locomotives

Sealed bids on 98 Navy vehicles —everything from autos to locomotives—will be opened at 9 a. m., December 16, in Building 176, Naval Gun Factory.

The vehicles will be available for inspection at the Naval Storage Depot, Brandywine, Md., from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m., Monday. A 25 percent deposit must accompany bids. Civilian employes and service personnel of the Navy and Marine Corps are not eligible to submit bids.

The units include station wagons, sedans, a coupe, fire trucks, concrete mixers, a crane, a locomotive and a railroad car. Catalogs may be obtained from the supply officer, Naval Gun Factory.

Mrs. William C. Mack

Mrs. William C. Mack, 79, mother of C. J. Mack, general manager of the Mayflower Hotel, died yesterday at her home in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Mrs. Mack, born Catherine Anzmann, and her late husband lived in Wilkes-Barre all their lives.

In addition to her son, she is survived by nine other children, Joseph A., 3700 39th st. nw.; James F., Colmar Manor, Md.; Charles F., Independence, Kans.; William J., Bristol, Pa.; Francis, and Mrs. Catherine Van Cleaf, New Jersey; Paul N., Thomas J. and Miss Louise J. Mack, all of Wilkes-Barre.

Funeral services will be held in Wilkes-Barre Friday.

County Drive Planned on Zoning Laws

Montgomery County's newly formed department of inspection and licenses is preparing the framework of an enforcement drive against zoning violators, A. Morton Thomas, jr., department head, told the county council yesterday.

Although the department has on file 37 complaints against zoning infractions, Thomas estimated there are "at least 1000 violations in the county." About half of these are in the Takoma Park section, he said.

Thomas submitted his first monthly report since the department's inception, on October 19, at the council's regular weekly meeting.

Many Single-Family Units

The majority of the zoning complaints involve the use of single-family dwellings for multifamily use, Thomas reported. This practice accounts for nearly all the Takoma Park violations, he added.

Thomas said his office has agreed following a request from Takoma Park officials to cooperate with the town in correcting conditions there.

He cautioned, however, that a crackdown should not be carried out too speedily since a zoning law revision is now under consideration and such present violations might be sanctioned under the revised code.

22 Are Unlicensed

Thomas also declared that 22 of the 58 private educational institutions in the county have not obtained 1949-1950 licenses. All have been notified, he said, and if license applications are not received within a "reasonable time" legal prosecutions will be undertaken.

Many of these operators of unlicensed schools did not know that county licenses are required, he said, and several have since filed applications. He also reported that 20 of the 35 nursing and convalescent homes, hospitals and sanitoria are operating without licenses.

School Bid Delayed to Get State Funds

Ten-day extension of the deadline on accepting a bid for the Suitland area high school was given Prince Georges County yesterday by the contractor to enable the county fathers leeway in obtaining school construction funds from the State.

The Prince Georges County Commissioners last week wrote to Governor W. Preston Lane jr., asking assurance that State money held up because the enabling act was held invalid by the Court of Appeals of Maryland would be forthcoming. Governor Lane yesterday called a special session to validate the law.

The bid on the Suitland school, which is $686, 431, less than had been anticipated, would have expired today. The County Commissioners asked for a 30-day extension but were granted the 10 days "reluctantly" by the contractor, Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart reported.

The commissioners yesterday directed Harry W. McNamee, president of the board, and Jerrold V. Powers, attorney to the board, to seek audience with Governor Lane to find out whether anything can be done to assure the State money.

Meanwhile, deadline on two other favorable bids is set for December 29. These are for the addition to the Fairmount Heights Negro High School and the elementary school for the Langley Park area.

The Board of County Commissioners held its regular reorganization yesterday and reelected Harry W. McNamee as president; Henry St. John Linden Briscoe was reappointed clerk to the board and his $50,000 bond approved; Miss Catherine A. Ridgley was reappointed secretary to the clerk and Mrs. Clara Ann Wilson, stenographer to the board. Jerrold V. Powers was reappointed attorney to the board and Robert Mathias was renamed assistant attorney.

In other actions the commissioners approved rebate of automobile tag funds to incorporated towns as follows:

University Park, $1767.50; Glenarden, $125; Greenbelt, $3587; Forest Heights, $515.50; Morningside, $640.50; Berwyn Heights, $435; Mt. Rainier, $5726; Bowie, $416.50. The county receives $5 from each license tag and pays half of that to incorporated towns in which the automobiles actually are domiciled.

Joined protest against a permit to allow a concrete pier and breakwater to be erected in Broad Creek near Silesia, Md., contending it would ruin the historical and recreational features of the area.

Heard a delegation from Piscataway district which asked a new bridge on old Indian Head rd. The bridge will be reached this winter, County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman reported.

Heard a delegation from Lyndon Hill Junior High School asking provision of a cafeteria and auditorium at the projected Suitland High School.

Intermarriage to Be Topic

Rabbi Ben Zion Kaganoff of Ohev Sholom Temple will speak on "Intermarriage—A Problem for Modern Jewry" at the Washington Jewish Community Center's Young Adult Club at 8:30 p. m. today at the center, 16th and Q sts. nw.

M. F. Breen, GU Engineer, Dies on Duty

Michael F. Breen, 72, night engineer at Georgetown University for the past 20 years, died yesterday, apparently following a heart attack while on duty.

His body was found on the steps of the new North Building shortly after midnight by Italo Ablondi, 18, a student and basketball star at the school, and was pronounced dead at the scene.

Mr. Breen, who lived at 212 8th st. se., had worked the midnight to 8 a. m. shift most of the years he was employed at the university. He was well known to nearly every faculty member.

He was born in Pittston, Pa., and moved to Washington about 46 years ago when he was employed here as a stationary engineer for the Pennsylvania Railroad.

He left the railroad in 1919 to take a job as engineer at the then newly-built Wardman Park Hotel. He joined the university staff in 1929.

He is survived by three sisters, Misses Jane, Margaret and Agnes Breen, all of the 8th st. address. He was the brother of the late Rev. John A. Breen of Pittsburgh.

Funeral services will be held at his home Friday at 9:30 a. m. followed by a requiem mass at 10 a. m. at St. Peter's Church, 2d and C sts. ne. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Huddie Ledbetter Dies; Famed as Singer of Blues

New York, Dec. 6 (AP).—Huddie "Leadbelly" Ledbetter, 60, former Louisiana farmhand who became an internationally known singer of blues and work songs, died today.

"Leadbelly" had been ill for a year with a bone infection, but only last July completed a concert tour of the South.

He was known as "King of the 12-String Guitar," an instrument not now in general use.

About 15 years ago the late John Lomax, collector of folklore, heard Ledbetter singing on a Texas farm. He arranged a national tour that led to night club and recording engagements here and abroad.

Mrs. John F. Sunderman

Mrs. John F. Sunderman, 72, of 2120 16th st. nw., died in George Washington University Hospital yesterday of a heart ailment.

Mrs. Sunderman, a widow, came here from Minneapolis, Minn., 15 years ago to live with her daughter, Miss Helen L. Sunderman, of the 16th st. address.

She was a member of the District Chapter, Royal Neighbors of America; the Spanish-American War Veterans Auxiliary in Minnesota, and the First Baptist Church of that city.

In addition to her daughter, she is survived by a son, Dr. Lloyd F. Sunderman, Indianapolis, Ind. Funeral services and burial will be held Saturday in Minneapolis.

Adm. Colclough Becomes Dean of GW Law School

Rear. Adm. Oswald S. Colclough, USN ret., yesterday took over his duties as dean of George Washington University Law School.

Colclough

Dean Colclough, former Navy judge advocate general and a 1935 graduate of the school, was appointed to his new job in October. He succeeds William Cabell Van Vleck, who gave up administrative duties last year because of ill health, but is continuing to teach at the school

Colclough's last naval assignment was command of the Pacific Fleet submarine force. During the war he served as Commander, Submarine Division 101; Commander Submarines, North Pacific Force, and commanding officer of the battleship North Carolina.

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen Dorcas Wendel, 31, wife of Clarence Wendel, a State Department employe, who died Monday, will be held at 10 a. m. Friday at the Pumphrey Funeral Home, 8434 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, Md. Burial will be in the Colesville Methodist Church Cemetery.

Mrs. Wendel died at the George Washington University Hospital after a short illness.

A native of Boulder, Colo., she had lived at 8405 Piney Branch ct., Silver Spring, Md., for three years, and prior to that time in Alexandria, Va.

She was a member of the auxiliary of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

Besides her husband, she is survived by two sons, Terence and Tracy of the Silver Spring address; her father, Henry Giller of Ely, Nev., and two brothers, Barton Giller of Long Beach, Calif., and Thomas Giller, Oroville, Calif.

Mail Clerk Tried To Burn Hotel, Court Is Told

The Government's case against a mail clerk charged with trying to burn up the residents of the Dunbar Hotel as a "service to the city" was presented yesterday to the District grand jury.

He is Samuel Cook, 33, of 1821 18th st. nw. He was arrested November 21 in the hotel, 2015 15th st. nw., after a midnight fire started on the sixth floor in a trash can and scorched a wall. He is held under $500 bond.

Police Pvts. D. H. Gould and J. F. McKenna of the Thirteenth Precinct said Cook admitted the arson charge and gave them a box of safety matches he bought to set the blaze.

They quoted him as saying:

"The people in this hotel have been harassing me. The best way to get rid of them is to burn them up. I am doing a service to the city."

MacArthur Group To Become 'Palisades'

Members of the MacArthur Boulevard Citizens Association last night resolved to change the name of their organization to Palisades Association. The proposed name is more descriptive of the geographical area, members declared. The proposal will be put to vote at the association's next meeting.

Last night's meeting was held in the Palisades Field House, Dana and Sherrier pls. nw. More than 70 members heard a brief description of the duties of the District Surveyor's office given by Marion Chinn, assistant engineer.

R. G. Merritt, Engineer, Dies At Bethesda

Robert G. Merritt, sr., retired valuation engineer and for many years a Washington resident, died yesterday in Bethesda Naval Hospital after an illness of three weeks.

Mr. Merritt, 66, was a native of Baltimore and a member of the class of 1906 at the United States Naval Academy. He left the Navy to enter the United States Foreign Service, where he stayed until 1925, becoming a valuation engineer for a Chicago firm.

Mr. Merritt lived in Washington until 1943, when he went to Chicago. After his retirement in 1948, Mr. Merritt moved to Flower Grove Farm, Chestertown, Md., where he was a member of the Chestertown Yacht Club. He also belonged to the Sons of the Revolution.

Mr. Merritt is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. William B. Moore of Amarillo, Tex., and Miss Elise W. Merritt of Stockholm, Sweden; a son, Comdr. Robert G. Merritt, jr., USN, of 3305 Woodley rd, and a sister, Mrs. Thomas T. Craven of Coronado, Calif.

Funeral services will be held at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Chestertown, Thursday at 3 p. m., with burial in the church cemetery.

Rites Today For T. L. Banks, Navy Clerk

Funeral services for Troy Lee Banks, 33, an accounting clerk with the Navy Department, who died Monday at Bethesda Naval Hospital, will be held at 1:30 p. m. today in the Petworth Baptist Church, 7th and Randolph sts. nw.

Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Banks, who lived at 4505 Sigsbee rd., Viers Mill Village, Silver Spring, was born in Selmer, Tenn. He went to high school in Michie, Tenn., and came to Washington five years ago to take a job with the Navy Department.

He was a member of Navy Department Post No. 58 of the American Legion. A Legion service was held last night at Chambers funeral Home, 1400 Chapin st. nw.

Mr. Banks is survived by his wife, Mrs. Audrey A. Banks, and a son, David Lee Banks of the Silver Spring address;; two brothers, Roy C. Banks of San Francisco and Charles H. Banks of Columbia, S. C.; a sister, Mrs. Mildred V. Ward, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bennett Banks, all of Corinth, Miss.

Salvation Army Kettles Collect $2265 of Quota

The Salvation Army has to date received $2265 in downtown kettles toward the $22,500 goal for its Christmas program, Frederick P. H. Siddons, Christmas committee chairman, announced last night.

Salvationists, Auxiliary members and volunteers in the area during the next three weeks will make Christmas visits to veterans' hospitals and other institution. Christmas parties will be held at the Army's community centers for the aged.

Appealing for continued public support, Siddons said that "Christmas must be more than a time of gift-giving or purely material joy —it is a commemoration of the greatest blessing this tired world ever had."

Pre-Christmas Lecture

The Great Lakes region will be the subject of the final pre-Christmas lecture of the National Capital Parks series at 8 p. m. Thursday in the Interior Department auditorium, 18th and C sts. nw. '50 Sesqui Fete Seen As Home Rule Boost

Herbert Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, last night predicted that "with the Sesquicentennial in the offing, Washington now has the greatest chance yet of gaining home rule."

"It seems little to ask of the descendants of men who gave their lives for democracy to stand up and work for the right of self-government and home rule," Leeman told the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

"In 1950 we hope to obtain the same rights as other citizens," Leeman advised the group which has for many years supported the fight for the vote in the District.

The group, meeting in the Columbia Heights Christian Church hall, 14th st. and Park rd. nw., passed a resolution calling for discharge of the home rule bill from the District Committee to secure a vote on the House floor.

Nearby Counties Link With District Backed

Metropolis View Citizens Association last night indorsed two resolutions of Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) which wuld link the District and nearby counties more closely.

The group, meeting in the Crosby Noyes School, 10th and Franklin sts. ne., indorsed measures to provide unified regulation of utilities of common concern, such as transportation, and to legalize mutual assistance by the District and volunteer fire departments of the counties.

Also approved was the suggestion a municipal stadium be built on Soldiers Home grounds, should the home be removed. Another resolution adopted asked for licensing of District contractors, to prevent operation of "fly-by-night" firms which collect fees in advance, then perform services badly if at all.

Plans for the group's Christmas celebration Sunday, December 18, at Edgewood Playground, with Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations as tentative speaker, were completed.

Citizens Group Discusses Surfacing Lot for Parking

Members of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night began a study of a proposal to surface a vacant lot at Tenley cir. and Wisconsin ave. nw., to be used as a parking space.

Members argued that the vacant strip of land would provide relief from present parking congestion in the area. A report of the study will be given at the association's next meeting in January.

The 25 members who met at the Hearst School, 37th and Upton sts. nw., appointed Mrs. Howard F. Barker as chairman of its education committee and William M. King, to head the police and fire protection committee.

Friday Club Concert a Rich Evening

By Paul Hume

Life can be so confusing. The Friday Morning Music Club held its annual Tuesday evening concert last night in Barker Hall of the YWCA.

Regardless of calendar considerations, it was a gala evening. Marie Handy sang a brilliant Mozart group; Margaret Tolson played an American piano sonata; Olga Bloecher played a flute suite, a women's chorus sang music by Mary Howe.

Miss Handy listed two songs and the great aria, "Martern Aller Arten" from the Seraglio. That she could carry this assignment off with honor is high tribute to her ability. Her coloratura scales were clear as a whistle and her style excellent. The music could have stood a bit more power but that is a hard thing to achieve in such taxing music.

If Jules Moquet's writing were as facile and attractive as Olga Bloecher's playing of it, the flute section of the evening would have been happier. For playing: excellent; for music: only 50 percent.

Mary Howe's Song of Palms reminds us of Sea Drift by Delius. Since we are particularly fond of the latter, it is a pleasant reminiscence. The handling of the ladies' voices, which some composers make monotonous, was competent and varied. The string accompaniment was played with varying success by members of the club's string ensemble.

Margaret Tolson brought the program to a thrilling climax with her account of Ross Lee Finney's third sonata. We find this a durable piece with compelling writing in the last three movements. Had the soloist had an adequate piano it would have been a far nobler realization of her intentions. The ladies who hold forth in Barker Hall each week are entitled to a better instrument. They are also entitled to credit for assembling so rich an evening.

Park Board Has Hot Potato in Bridge Location

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will toss around at least one hot potato when it goes into three-day session today—the highly controversial problem of the proper location for a bridge across the Anacostia.

Planning Director John Nolen, jr., wants a bridge at Massachusetts ave. Should an additional one be needed, it should be built along the lower Baltimore-Washington Parkway, near the end of M st. extended and Maryland ave. ne., near South Dakota ave. ne., Nolan feels.

But the District Commissioners want it at East Capitol st., and an additional bridge between the present Sousa bridge and the 11th st. bridge.

Avoided Draft, Chinese Loses U. S. Status

A 40-year-old importer-exporter lost his status as a permanent resident of this country by getting a job with the Bank of China "presumably to avoid military service" during the last war, Judge Matthew F. McGuire of District Court ruled yesterday.

Loser by the decision was Chin Jung Dot of New York City and Seattle. He had come to this country in 1926 as the minor son of a treaty merchant and claimed that his legal residence here was secure.

In 1948, he applied for a reentry permit after stating he wished to take a six-month's business trip abroad. The reentry permit was denied him because his position during the war had exempted him from Selective Service registration since he was an official of a foreign government.

In his brief, Assistant United States Attorney Samuel Abrams said that since Chin is no longer a resident legally here, he presumably could be deported.

Council Approves Mt. Rainier Bond Issue of $13,000

The Mount Rainier Town Council last night authorized a $13,000 bond issue to repave 34th st. from Rhode Island ave. through the business district.

The money will be borrowed from the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co.

The council granted the petition of the Wedemeyer Steel Co. to rezone property bounded by Oak st., Wells ave. and 37th st. from residential Class A to industrial Class E.

A third clerk, at $1200 a year, to handle day work in headquarters, will be added to the police force, according to another action.

Bartender Fights Return In Pa. Death

A 31-year-old Hyattsville bartender, acquitted of murder charges last Thursday in the death of a man-about-town in Philadelphia, surrendered himself to Maryland officials yesterday to fight new charges and possible extradition in the case.

The man, James Comber, of the 5700 block of 42d st., Hyattsville, announced through his attorney that he will claim "former jeopardy."

The attorney, Ignatius J. Keane of Hyattsville, said this means Comber will maintain that his "life and liberty" were endangered by the trial once and cannot be again.

The new charges—assault and battery—were brought at the instigation of the Philadelphia trial judge, Judge Joseph Sloane.

Judge Sloane berated the all-woman jury so severely for what he called "a decided miscarriage of justice" that they all burst into tears and one of them fainted. Then he ordered the jury investigated.

Keane said Comber, brought before Justice of the Peace Mary S. Fainter at Hyattsville yesterday, posted $100 bond for an appearance on a fugitive warrant December 19 before Trial Magistrate Arthur P. Owens at Hyattsville.

If the Pennsylvania Governor asks the Maryland Governor for Comber's extradition in the meantime, the magistrate will set a hearing on the requisition. If not, Owens can either continue the case or can dismiss Comber.

The prosecution contended at the trial that the dead man, Hubert E. Madden, 53, a sales executive and clubman, went on a drinking bout last March with Comber. Comber, then on a day off, was a bartender in a small private club in Philadelphia designed to circumvent State liquor laws.

The two men, according to testimony, visited the club, and once outside apparently had an argument.

Madden fell or was knocked down. The prosecution, asking for a second-degree murder conviction, charged that Comber kicked Madden and that these injuries resulted in Madden's death.

Reporters learned after the trial that the jury attributed "acute alcoholism" as a contributing factor in the death.

Would it Lighten Girl's Spirit, Help Her Morale and Improve Her Experiences If She Were to Depart From Scenes of Unhappy Past?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Does it help or harm one's emotional balance to leave a place where one has been unhappy? Although my life is peaceful at present, the place where I am living has been the scene of so many emotional storms in the past that I am miserable here. The city itself reminds me of the unpleasant past.

I have an even disposition ordinarily, but I am losing my self control and seem unable to bear the slightest strain. Each day I feel that I must escape these surroundings, that I must go somewhere else a long distance away.

I don't like to hurt my family by leaving, and in a sense I am tied by financial responsibilities, but I could solve that problem by sending money if I go away. I am quite young and feel as if I could make a fresh start by getting away from the vapors of the past. Please give me your opinion. N. S.

Some Emotional Climates Are Bad

DEAR N. S.: Certain kinds of emotional climate can be bad for one—just as certain geographical conditions are unfavorable to human health and would need to undergo great hygienic improvements to be made safely habitable.

Thus in meeting your question—"Does it help or harm one's emotional balance to leave a place where one has been unhappy?"—it is important to consider what kind of emotional climate surrounds you at home, in the bosom of your family.

Since you are quite young, have never yet lived apart from your family, and today look back on your past as unpleasant history scarred by many emotional storms, it seems logical to suppose that (1) your family has been the consistently most powerful influence upon your spirit and experiences, and (2) that this influence, or the results upon you, are not good.

Your reference to your ordinarily smooth disposition, now beginning to crack up, unable to bear the slightest strain, suggests: 1. That you inherited a strong constitution, capable of withstanding a lot of punishment, and that you've been trained (or expected) furthermore to endure disagreeable stresses without protest. 2. But that the tension and frustration of existing in a caged or wing-clipped manner, without encouragement or opportunity to soar happily and successfully in socially expressive ways where you are, is doing violence to your emotional health.

Old Hurts Healed by Healthy Growth

VERY LIKELY your most recent distress is linked to disappointment in love, because such misfortune is the usual portion of youngsters who've had little happiness at home; and in unhappy youth the common reaction to romantic heartbreak is to brood on escapist plans, on the supposition that one's grief might dissolve in transit if one fled far enough away to fresh surroundings and new adventures.

And now, coming back to your question, I wish to emphasize: 1. Running away from the scene of unhappy personal history will not of itself change your future experiences for the better. 2. However, in order to clear ground (or provide elbow room) for revising and improving your personality, and establishing harmonious relations to others, you may have to put wide distance between yourself and your family.

One cannot break physically with "the vapors of the past." One can only continue to grow, so that gradually the past is left in the distance, an interesting experience, part of the pattern of the tapestry that is one's life. But in order to grow, it is sometimes necessary to procure conditions favorable to growth. And it is for you to decide whether you have the stamina, ingenuity and self-starting capacity to separate from family and make a success of establishing independent roots. There is nothing in your sketchy letter that sheds any light on your character resources.

Christmas Decorations

Hang a valance of pine boughs above a curtain of pinup Christmas ornaments. Bedeck your fireplace with green branches and dripping tinsel stars.

To make your gifts attractive, why not tie shocking-pink Christmas balls on a dark green package? With scotch tape, fasten millinery flowers onto striped paper . . . or string popcorn around a shiny black box.

Ever Eat 'Spotted Dog?'

By Lucia Brown

Faggits, pease puddin', pink pickled cabbage and "spotted dog"—that's the menu for Thursday night's meeting of the Women's City Club.

It will be an excursion back to the dinner tables of old England. These dishes were popular in the time of good Queen Bess and are still enjoyed by modern-day Britishers, says Mrs. James W. Boyer, chairman for the evening.

Faggits are undoubtedly one of the distinguished ancestors of our own hamburgers. They're made of very lean ground beef, highly seasoned with pepper, rolled in sliced onion and baked in a very hot oven for 20 minutes.

The pease puddin' to go with them is made by soaking split yellow peas overnight in salted water, then cooking them slowly until they are of the consistency of mashed potatoes.

Pink pickled cabbage is red cabbage sliced as for slaw and packed in jars, with a vinegar mixture poured over it boiling hot. In case you'd like to try this piquant dish, here is Mrs. Boyer's recipe:

PINK PICKLED CABBAGE

1 pint white vinegar
1 stick cinnamon
2 bay leaves
2 teaspoons whole cloves
½ teaspoon each basil, rosemary and sweet marjoram
2 tablespoons dark brown sugar

Put all herbs into cheesecloth bag and add to sugar and vinegar. Cook together 25 minutes to make syrup. Pour over cabbage which has been sliced and packed in jars. The jars can be sealed and the cabbage will keep indefinitely. Serve it as you would slaw.

The "spotted dog" which will be the dessert at next Thursday night's meal is also called suetty pudding. "Spotted dog" is the Royal Navy's name for it. It's a boiled pudding, made with beef suet, flour and currants, and topped with treacle or jelly. Dinner will be served promptly at 6:45 p. m. to members and guests at the Women's City Club.

Finland's Independence Celebrated

By Marie McNair

FINLAND, the country which never reneged on its debts to the USA; the tiny republic which produced the great composer, Sibelius, celebrated its Independence Day yesterday. At the reception given by the Finnish Minister and Madame Jutila, diplomats and dignitaries came to offer congratulations.

Yesterday was a day of parties. There was the cocktail fete given by Comdr. William Hudgins for Barbara Slingluff and Comdr. Jesse Gay, who will be married on Thursday. And there was the party at the Shoreham by Greta Kempton, who's painted many of the Washington great, in honor of Mrs. Dorothy Hoover White of New York and Miami. Second only in point of interest was Miss Kempton's almost finished portrait of Lewis L. Strauss, member of the United States Atomic Energy Commission.

The Minister and Madame Jutila had brought a bit of Finland into their drawing room with the bright costume of their daughter, Vappu, whose full red ankle-length skirt was covered with a red embroidered white pinafore. Madame Jutila had chosen a gown of teal blue crepe.

Delicious Pastry Is a Specialty

GUESTS gathered in the sun room about the bar, or made their way across the house to the dining room where tea and coffee and all kinds of tea time accompaniments were served. Finnish pinwheels of flaky pastry filled with plum conserve, a specialty at Christmas time in Finland, were disappearing like the proverbial hot cakes.

The French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, was there alone. The Philippine Ambassador, Joaquin Elizalde, was being entertained by Rosa Ponselle, whose nosegay of red carnations lent color accent to her black frock and hat. The Canadian Ambassador and Mrs. Hume Wrong were there, as well as the Irish Minister Sean Nunan, the Swiss Minister and Madame Bruggmann and the Austrian Minister and Madame Kleinwaechter.

Emil Hurja talked with Maxwell Hamilton, our one-time Minister to Finland. The Turkish Ambassador, Feridun Erkin, joined Miss Ponselle's charmed circle. I chatted with Mrs. John Steelman, missing her husband, who is with President Truman in Key West; and with Mrs. Robert Freer and Mrs. Charles Brannan, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, whose dark hair was free of a hat.

Feminine Topic Under Discussion

SAID "how-de-do" to Mme. El-Khouri, wife of the Syrian Minister, who divides her time between Washington and New York while her husband sits in at the U. N.; Mme. Mica Trbojevic, sister of the Yugoslav Ambassador, and the Arthur Vennells.

Mrs. James Webb, wife of the Undersecretary of State, was discussing a sure-fire feminine topic, "the diet." Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Mrs. Albert Ely, Miss Fay Lewishon, here from New York for a week; Mrs. Edgar Quayle, Judge George Neilson and Mrs. Neilson, and the Air Attache of the New Zealand Embassy, Air Commodore J. L. Findlay and Mrs. Findlay.

Then there were the Military Air Attache of the Netherlands Embassy and Mme. Roos; Brigadier D. Chaudhuri, Military Attache of the Indian Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Whittemore, Arthur Saul, George L. Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Jack B. Tate.

Friends of Engaged Pair at Party

MOST of the young friends of Barbara Slingluff and Commander Gay, and some of their friends were at Commander Hudgins' gay cocktail gathering. Drucie Snyder and her fiance, Major John Horton, were together. And I saw the young Leslie Douglases, Jane Lingo and Mrs. Robert Dyer with their heads together; Madame Thors, wife of the Icelandic Minister, and Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Bretsch.

Mrs. Ted Acheson, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Murphy and Mrs. Deb Glassford were in animated conversation. There was talk of the expected visit of lively Sharman Douglas, daughter of Lewis Douglas, United States Ambassador to Great Britain, who is due in town today. She will be at Hugo Gouthier's party on Saturday afternoon in honor of M. and Mme. Raoul Malland of Paris.

Here and there were Col. Don Lowry, Marvin Coles, Mrs. Edward Tr. glown, Mrs. Hope Ridings Miller, Mrs. Katharine Byron, Miss Elise Skylstead, and Miss Beverly Farrington.

Departing Guest Is Luncheon Honoree

MRS. WILLIAM H. WATSON, wife of Captain Watson, USN., who is returning shortly to her home in California after a stay of several weeks at the Shoreham, was guest of honor at a tea yesterday given by Mrs. Thomas B. Dugan, wife of Captain Dugan, USN.

Among the guests were Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. John R. Steelman, Mrs. Frank Beatty, Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, Mrs. Clark Woodward, Mrs. Walter Wilds, Mrs. Sailing Baruch, Mrs. Sidney Graves, Mrs. John W. Roper, Countess de Castellane, Mrs. Frederic Mitchell Gould, Mrs. James Souby, Mrs. Martin Vogel, Mrs. Roy St. Lewis and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg.

Cards Issued For Tea Party

THE REV. MEADE BOLTON MacBRYDE has issued cards for a tea on December 11 from 5 to 7 in his apartment at the Chastleton. Taking their turn at the tea table will be Mrs. John L. Proctor, Mrs. Charles C. Holeman, Mrs. Hollis L. Imes, Mrs. Guy S. Stanton and Mrs. Stewart MacBryde.

Dinner Dance Set To Benefit Hospital

A dinner dance for the benefit of the National Homeopathic Hospital will be held in the Lounge Riviera, Hotel 2400, on Monday, December 19, for the benefit of the National Homeopathic Hospital. Mrs. Carden Warner, president of the women's board, has appointed her committees, headed by Mrs. Stephen Verges, chairman and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, cochairman.

Reside in Alexandria

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Krafft have returned from their honeymoon in the Pocono Mountains to reside in Alexandria, Va. They were married October 29 at St. Anthony's Church in Brookland, D. C.

Luncheon Honors Mrs. Baruch

MRS. THEODORE T. HAYES entertained at a luncheon at the United Nations Club yesterday in honor of Mrs. Sailing W. Baruch of Miami Beach, Fla. Mrs. Baruch is visiting her son, Donald Baruch, now living in Washington, and will return to Florida for the Christmas holidays.

Bridge and canasta followed the luncheon. Mrs. Hayes is the sister of Mrs. Meredith Howard Harliss, founder and former president of the United Nations Club.

Miss Joan Hartman, pianist, and Jean Smith, baritone, will make their concert debut at the United Nations Club on Tuesday, December 13, at 9 p. m. Both musician are Washingtonians and have appeared separately on radio and television.

Baroness von Schoen is chairman of arrangements for the concert.

Beirut Post Draws Gordon O. Stone

Protocol Prompter

Many a Slip Twixt Cup And Tea; Foreign Service Wives Tipped on Tactics

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

SINCE last August Mrs. Paul Alling, widow of the former Ambassador to Pakistan, has been setting up a most interesting State Department assignment. Though Mrs. Alling, who is a member of the Foreign Service, has no official title, she's technically an adviser in the Foreign Service Institute.

Her job has no fixed pattern. The State Department gave her full discretion to do whatever she believes most helpful to the ever-increasing number of Foreign Service personnel dispatched to the world's far corners.

The only formal part of her instruction consists of two talks. The first she calls "Problems of the First Post"; the second, "Customs and Social Usages."

Romaine Alling specializes, though, in solving personal problems—every imaginable kind of problem from how much money to take along to a new post, or how to travel with a baby, to the number of evening dresses necessary to cope with foreign social life. She's been amazed how many in top service levels have come to her for advice and believes her most valuable contribution is to give reassurance and warmth when attending to each individual's worries.

Her Instruction Down to Earth

MRS. ALLING'S instruction is practical, too. Recently a group of young wives of both Foreign Service and Civil Government officials met at her house. Mrs. Alling demonstrated how to run a tea party, how to make proper tea and explained such exotic minutiae as the difference between green and black teas. She also untangles such everyday social hazards as how to "break up" a dinner party, explains why the foreign hostess is never served first and warns against the nasty American habit of puffing cigarettes through a choice meal.

Clothes, too, come in for a great deal of attention. Mrs. A. advises on what and how many of this or that to take, according to climate and general social activity. For example, she advised Eugenie Anderson, our new Ambassador to Denmark, to include 30 evening dresses in her wardrobe. The dresses didn't have to be new—but 30 were definitely needed because of Copenhagen's active court life and the exhausting fact that Mrs. Anderson, in line of duty, would have to "dress" almost every evening.

Helps Husbands and Wives

RECENTLY, Romaine Alling has been helping husbands as well as wives of assorted military aides, and agricultural attaches bound for overseas posts. One of the most interesting groups being processed at the Foreign Service Institute are civil government officials for Germany. They are undergoing a 3½ month's training course and their wives will come in for a full share of instruction.

Romaine Alling has a perfect background for her job. Her husband was a Foreign Service officer for 17 years during which he was stationed in Beirut, Aleppo and Damascus, then sent to the Montreux Conference in Switzerland, assigned to Morocco as Minister and finally appointed Ambassador to Pakistan. Mrs. Alling has had a hard time in the past two years. Her husband died, her younger daughter had infantile paralysis and all her furniture was ruined while being shipped home. The new job has proved a wonderful source of cheer.

Her elder daughter, Anne, works for the State Department, too, in the South East Asia Division where her father commenced his diplomatic career.

Italian Bazaar Draws Crowd To Embassy

By Elizabeth Maguire

Yesterday's bazaar at the Italian Embassy was a "successo extraordinario." Everyone was there and everyone bought something. Doors opened at 10, and by 2 you couldn't get in with a shoe horn.

In the late afternoon, when the crowds had dwindled a bit, it was evident that Signora Tarchiani, wife of the Italian Ambassador, had gathered some of Washington's prettiest women to sell Italy's handicrafts. Mrs. Edward Burling had charge of linens, Mrs. Stephen Dorsey sold tea tickets, Miss Madelaine Wikstrom-Angelin art books, Senora Paresce, costume jewelry, and Miss Laura Tuckerman, handworked leather goods. Proceeds will go to an Italian war orphanage.

The Ambassador of Iran, Hussein Ala, over a cup of tea in the dining room, said the Shah of Iran will head for Sun Valley today for 10 days of skiing and then go to New York where he will have dinner with Gen. Dwight Eisenhower. After that, said the Ambassador, the Shah will fly to Iran.

Gayest note at the bazaar was the accordion playing of Sandra Martino, young daughter of the Italian Military Attache and Senora de Martino. She and other embassy youngsters were dressed in colorful native costumes.

Philippine Ambassador Is Dinner Host

THE PHILIPPINE Ambassador, Joaquin M. Elizalde, gave a dinner last evening at the embassy for Thomas Lockett, formerly Charge d'Affaires of the United States Embassy at Manila, and Mrs. Lockett. Others attending the dinner were former United States Ambassador to the Philippines Emmet O'Neal, and Mrs. O'Neal, the Assistant Director of the Budget and Mrs. J. Weldon Jones, Gen. and Mrs. Ralph A. Lovett, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ely, and officials of the Philippines and their wives.

Basic Travel Wardrobe Is Sound Investment

Everyone seems to be traveling all the time these days. Since we're all entitled to paid vacations now, people are taking them in all months of the year.

So it's really a sound investment to start building up a basic travel wardrobe that you will always have ready to pack on short notice.

A good tweed or fleece coat is the cornerstone. Then add a tweed or a knit suit—either travels without crushing too much. A jersey and a nylon blouse; a dress-up dress in puckered nylon; a handful of nylon lingerie; two pairs of street and one pair of dress shoes; and you're set for a trip by plane, by train, by car, or by steamer.

Artists Hold Showing at Whitney Home

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

ARE YOU right-handed, left-handed or ambidextrous? And what medium do you use—oils, crayons, water colors, charcoal?

These were the questions predominating among a group of sculptors and artists yesterday. Occasion was an art exhibit presented by members of the Washington Chapter, National Society of Arts and Letters, at the Georgetown home of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

Mrs. Emma W. Slack, charter member of the organization, boasted of being a left-handed painter. Her portrait, "The Sheik's Daughters," was painted on porcelain.

Among other striking works were several dog paintings by Miss Lillian Tiffany.

Mrs. Clark Clifford, who specializes in clowns, New Hampshire scenes and salt marshes, had several of her works on display as did Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. Maebel Perry Edwards, Mrs. Marcella Comes, Mrs. Naomi Rabb Winston, Mrs. Robert C. Goodale, Mrs. Edward G. Hale and Mrs. Winifred Howell Artaud, general chairman of the exhibit.

Mrs. Corcoran Thom exhibited a pair of bronze bookends which she designed for her son.

Among highlights of the program was a musical program given by Mrs. Bonita Crowe, composer, concert pianist and organist. Mrs. W. Ridgely Chapline arranged the afternoon's events.

Mrs. Jesse Frank Nicholson, hospitality chairman, presided during the tea hour. Taking turns pouring were Lady Lewis, Mrs. Thom, Mrs. James McMillan Gibson, Mrs. Vance D. Chapline, Mrs. John Catesby Weedon, Mrs. Rosalyn Buchanan Schuyler, Mrs. J. Donald Halsted and Mrs. Clifford.

OAS Goals on Program

THE Political Study Club will hear first-hand reports of the objectives and accomplishments of the Organization of American States from the United States Ambassador to the OAS, Paul C. Daniels, at a meeting on December 17.

The meeting which will be held at 2:30 p. m. at the Washington Club, will include a musical program by Stewart Toleman, pianist.

Legion Auxiliary Sells Seals

ANOTHER local group which will begin work today on the Christmas Seal Sale is the District of Columbia department, American Legion Auxiliary.

Members of local units will be in charge of the booths in Woodward and Lothrop and The Hecht Co. until December 22. In addition to these downtown sale sites by the auxiliary units, the James Reese Europe unit will serve at the Columbia Heights Post Office while members of the James E. Walker unit will handle the sale of seals at the T st. branch. The White-Whitmire unit will sell seals at the Yellow Cab office, December 10 to 17.

Opti-Mrs. Club Elects

MRS. JAMES EVANS is the newly elected president of the National Capital Opti-Mrs. Club. Serving with Mrs. Evans will be Mrs. John Pumphrey, vice president; Mrs. Ralph Bell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Arnold Anderson, recording secretary; Mrs. John J. Jones, treasurer; Mrs. Walter A. Neil, chairman of ways and means; and Mrs. John Carpenter, chairman of the Industrial Home School project.

Chevy Chase Club Kept Busy

THE Chevy Chase Woman's Club has a big task (but a pleasant one) slated for Monday—that of wrapping 200 Christmas gifts for hospitalized service men and women in this area.

The wrapping party will be held at 10 a. m. in the clubhouse with Mrs. George Kelly as chairman assisted by Mrs. Thornton Owen.

On Wednesday, December 14, 40 dozen cookies will be provided for the Snack Bar at the Naval Hospital to be used throughout the hospital wards at their parties.

Today, club members will man Christmas Tuberculosis Seal Sale booths at the Riggs National Bank and will continue the sale until December 22.

Mme. Beran to Speak

MME. IRENE BERAN, one of the few women in the world who holds a diploma first class from the Cordon Bleu (famous French cooking school) in Paris will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Club Feminin de Liaison Franco-Americaine today.

The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Carl H. Farman, 2810 Cathedral ave. nw. with the new club's president, Mme. Andre Jenks, presiding at the meeting.

Madame Beran, who also holds a diploma from the Gastronomic Academy of Madrid, and German, Italian and Viennese certificates, will talk on French cooking in Europe.

Plans Farewell Party

Mrs. Seymour Jeselsohn is entertaining at a farewell party for Senora de Diaz, wife of the Third Secretary of the Dominican Republic, on December 13, from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Gift Suggestions

The Congressional Country Club will offer gift suggestions from 10 leading Georgetown shops at its regular Wednesday luncheon today.

Booths will be open from noon to 4 p. m., with luncheon scheduled for 1 o'clock. No selling will take place, but there'll be plenty of time for leisurely browsing among the antiques, handicrafts, apparel, accessories, imports, toys and books.

About Christmas Gifts for Tradesmen

We have always lived in an apartment house and we used to give a Christmas present to the manager and money to the janitor. But now we own a house and I don't know to whom and how much Christmas money we should give. I know the garbage and trash collectors come around and ask for money but what about the mailman, the laundry man (who comes around once a week), and the delivery boy who brings my meat and groceries once a week? I would like to know how much to give.

A READER.

The amount you give and to whom you give it is so much a personal matter that a definite answer is not really possible. Generally speaking, however, for the people who have served you faithfully throughout the year, but have not rendered extra service, a dollar or two in an envelope which also contains a Christmas card should adequately show your appreciation. In the case of a person who has rendered service beyond that required by his job, you may wish to give a bit more.

Several days ago a request appeared in your column for suggestions on starting a small home business and you suggested baking. Recently Nancy Craig's program (Woman of Tomorrow) over ABC featured success stories of home businesses and quoted a book which I'm sure should be helpful to your reader. It is entitled "How to Make a Home Business Grow," published by Prentice Hall. It gives suggestions and practical help on planning expenses, profit margins, and marketing.

Another reader.

Thank you so much for this helpful suggestion.

I am interested in securing two copies of a booklet put out by The Washington Post on "Making Slip Covers."

I. A. H.

You can get this pattern by writing Alice Brooks, The Washington Post, 102 Household Arts Dept., Box 168, Old Chelsea Station, New York, 11, N. Y. The cost of each pattern is 25 cents in coin.

I am wondering if you can help me to locate a place where I can buy either in extract or in ground or powdered form some cardamon seed. It comes in the above and whole form but I do not want the whole.

C. E. N.

There is a grocery store in the 1400 block of Irving st. which has on hand 97 different spices and among them is powdered cardamon. For further information I suggest you call the store at Decatur 6717.

Constant Reader wrote about repainting lamps white. If she uses showcard paint, then shellacs or varnishes it, she can later remove the varnish with alcohol or turpentine and remove white showcard paint with ater. I so treated my lamp eight years ago and it is still pretty.

D. A. C.

Thank you for this tip!

Can you tell me where I could have a Bible rebound with a new leather cover? My 40-year-old Bible is so badly worn (the cover) that there is nothing left of the leather. What care should be given the leather binding to prevent this happening again?

H. W. L.

There is a firm on Pennsylvania ave. which specializes in rebinding old and rare books. They can be reached by calling National 0113.

If the book is bound in smooth leather, drying out can be prevented by rubbing it occasionally with a good leather conditioner which can be bought at the shoe stores. Apply it according to the directions which come with the product you buy and follow the application with enough rubbing to give a hard, dry finish.

If the Bible is stored at any time, do not store it where the air is hot and dry.

I WISH TO THANK J. I. of Washington and J. E. D. of Gaithersburg, who have written in response to J. W. G.'s request for a caricaturist. Your letters have been forwarded to him.

Does anyone have a pattern for an infant's baby shoe made out of felt? It is a perfect little shoe with three tiny buttons and buttonholes and scallops on the side where the button and button holes are. I used to make these by the dozen for bazaars years ago, but have lost the pattern.

D. C. T.

If some of our readers will be good enough to send the pattern to the Ask Anne Department, I'll be glad to forward it to Mrs. D. C. T.

SEVERAL OF OUR READERS have sent in the names and addresses of organizations which have use for old eyeglasses:

H. M. C. of Arlington tells us that the Rev. Everett E. Backlin, Broadway Baptist Church, 208 W. Euclid, Spokane, Wash., collects old eyeglasses and sends them to the mission field, where they are used to great advantage. He cautions that before they are mailed they should be wrapped in cotton and packed in the regular glasses case.

L. C. P. of Washington writes that the Burrall Class of Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., also collects glasses to be sent to overseas missionaries.

E. T. McC. of Arlington and W. A. F. of Washington have written that glasses can be sent to "New Eyes for the Needy," Short Hills, N. J. Mrs. T. N. B. of Chevy Chase and Miss K. B. of Washington have also sent a Short Hills, N. J., address but they have said to address the glasses to Mrs. Arthur Terry, c/o The Junior Service League, Short Hills, N. J.

Mrs. C. H. S., Alexandria, adds the Episcopal Ear, Eye and Throat Hospital, 1147 15th st. nw., Washington, to the list. The hospital uses old glasses for indigent cases.

I wish to thank all of these people, and also H. G. of Alexandria and F. M. C. of Washington who sent in this information.

Would you be good enough to send me or print a copy of the recipes for squash, mince, etc., pies made with prepared mixes? These recipes apeared in Parade a few Sundays ago, and were inadvertently thrown away.

H. C.

MINCEMEAT CREAM DESSERT

2 cups cold milk
1 cup prepared mincemeat
½ teaspoon lemon juice
1 pkg. instant vanilla dessert

Pour milk into large bowl; add mincemeat, lemon juice and instant vanilla dessert; whip rapidly with rotary beater 30 seconds, until smooth.

PUMPKIN CREAM PIE

1¾ cups cold milk
1 cup canned pumpkin
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1 pkg. instant vanilla dessert

Pour milk into large bowl; add pumpkin, sugar, cinnamon, cloves, nutmeg, and instant vanilla dessert; whip rapidly with rotary beater 30 seconds, until smooth. Turn into 9-inch baked pie shell; chill.

MAPLE RICE PUDDING

2½ cups cold milk
¼ cup syrup
¼ teaspoon maple flavoring
1 pkg instant vanilla dessert
2 cups cooked rice
½ cup raisins

Pour milk into large bowl; add maple syrup, flavoring and instant vanilla dessert; whip rapidly with rotary beater 30 seconds, until smooth. Combine rice and raisins in baking dish; pour maple mixture over this mixture; bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F) 25 minutes. The yield: 8 servings.

Inquiries and contributions to the Ask Anne column must be in written form. We regret that time does not permit handling them by telephone. Address letters and cards to Anne, Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C.

D. C. Appliance Sales Heavier, Led by Video

By S. Oliver Goodman

October sales of seven types of electrical appliances showed increases over the same 1948 month, the Electric Institute of Washington reported yesterday.

The upward trend is believed to have continued in November and this month, customarily good months in the appliance field.

Biggest increase in October was in television sales, which nearly tripled. Video sales for the month totaled 6444, as compared with 2234 in the like period last year.

Good-sized sales gains also were shown in home freezers, oil burners, washers, dryers, water heaters and roasters.

A lower trend was reported for ranges, refrigerators, ironers, ordinary and combination radios and vacuum cleaners.

Comparative sales figures for October and the first 10 months, as reported by the Electric Institute, follow:

	Oct. 1948.	Oct. 1949.	10 mo. 1948.	10 mo. 1949.
Refrigerators	538	375	4,435	2,662
Home freezers	2,343	1,662	20,819	17,180
Oil burners	237	256	1,205	1,272
Ironers	326	251	2,840	1,814
Washers	1,703	2,764	21,184	18,857
Dryers	55	201	560	684
Water heaters	181	216	2,083	1,578
Straight radios	8,065	3,196	61,230	29,747
Comb. radios	1,209	364	13,934	15,081
Television	2,234	6,444	13,981	29,896
Vacuum cleaners	1,630	1,581	13,076	13,168

The report covers retail sales of wired appliances in the District of Columbia, Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties.

BONUS: The City Bank of Washington will pay a yearend bonus to all junior officers and employes amounting to 2.7 percent of total base salaries up to a maximum of 10 years. President Clarence F. Burton explained that if an employe earned $2500 a year for 10 years, he would receive 2.7 percent of $25,000, or $675. If employed seven years at $2500 a year, he would get 2.7 percent of 17,500 or $472.50.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Ralph G. Bosher, district manager of Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Co. in Virginia Beach, will be guest speaker at a luncheon meeting Thursday of the D. C. Life Underwriters Association in the Mayflower . . . R. Bruce Lambert, former merchandise sales manager of the Westinghouse Electric Supply Co.'s Washington branch, will become manager of the Hotpoint division of the Simon Distributing Corp., effective December 16 . . . Donald Gordon, deputy governor of the Bank of Canada, has been elected president and board chairman of the Grand Trunk Western Railroad, succeeding R. C. Vaughan, retired.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 6 (AP)—Fairly general selling developed in the pits at the Board of Trade today. The sell-off followed recent advances which had carried many contracts to new seasonal highs.

The trade was influenced by a statement by Ralph Trigg, president of the Commodity Credit Corporation that his agency is nearing its borrowing limit. However, he said that around a billion dollars remains, but the agency is going to ask for more money.

At the finish wheat was ⅝ to 1¾ lower; corn was ⅛ to 1¼ lower; oats were unchanged to 1½ lower; rye was 2 to 3 cents lower; soybeans were 2¼ to 3 cents lower, and lard was 15 to 22 cents a hundredweight lower.

Phone Pension Hike 'Unfair', Union Says

Peaceful Sunday

Pearl Harbor Was 8 Years Ago Today

It seems so long ago . . .

Yet, it was only eight years ago today that this Nation was jerked from the ease of a Sunday afternoon and plunged into the most hellish war in its history.

Franklin Delano Roosevelt in his war message to the Congress the following day said December 7, 1941, was "a date which will live in infamy."

December 7, 1941—that day when Japanese bombs rained out of the skies at Pearl Harbor to blast and sear an unsuspecting American fleet—was the forerunner of many dark days for the United States.

Slowly, the tide changed. On May 7, 1945, Germany surrendered unconditionally to the Allies. Japan surrendered on August 14, 1945.

All-American Boy And His Licenses Leave Judge Dizzy

Chester, Pa., Dec. 6 (AP).—A 22-year-old motorist appearing in police court today on a charge of speeding produced too much identification for Magistrate R. Robinson Lowry.

"So you're living at the Chester YMCA," Lowry observed when Conrad Brook handed him a wallet filled with identification cards.

"But your car has Texas registration plates," the magistrate added.

"Yes, I used to work there," replied Brook.

"But your driver's license is from California."

"That's where I learned to drive," explained Brook.

"And this card gives a New Mexico town as your mailing address," explained the magistrate. "Where are you from anyway?"

"Well, my folks live in Florida," said Brook.

Lowry ordered him held for further investigation.

U. S. Asks Canada Not to Suspend Colonial Airlines

The State Department asserted yesterday that Canada would be violating an air agreement with United States if it carried out a threat to bar Colonial Airlines from flying planes between Montreal and New York.

Revealing that Canada has agreed to talk over the matter, the department called on this country's northern neighbor to hold up any plans to suspend Colonial's license until the talks are over.

The department revealed it had sent a note to Canada on the airline quarrel after Senators Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) and Owen Brewster (R., Me.) denounced Canada's action as "arbitrary" and "capricious."

The Canadian Air Transport Board on December 1 issued an order for Colonial, a United States-owned line to "show cause" next Monday why its license to fly planes between Montreal and New York should not be suspended.

The two District divisions of the CIO Communication Workers of America yesterday filed charges of unfair labor practices against the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

The charges, filed with the Baltimore regional office of the National Labor Relations Board, asserted that C&P had violated the Taft-Hartley Act when it recently raised employe pensions to $100 a month.

Other CWA affiliates filed similar unfair charges against the Chesapeake & Potomac companies of Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia at the Baltimore NRLB office.

The charges were made at the direction of the parent union, which yesterday ordered simultaneous complaints to be lodged by 34 CWA affiliates against the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and its Bell System subsidiaries.

Joseph A. Beirne, CWA president, declared yesterday that A. T. & T. and the Bell System changed the pension plan on November 16, but did not notify the union until November 21. This unilateral action was taken by the Bell System, Beirne said, at a time when the union's affiliates are in the process of negotiating new contracts with the phone companies.

Beirne charged that the Bell System was "seeking to destroy collective bargaining" by modifying conditions of employment "outside normal labor-management relations," and that the subsidiaries were "compelled" to do so by the A. T. & T.

The AT&T countered the union charges with a statement that in making upward revisions of the system's benefit and pension plan, it was using a procedure in effect since the program was initiated in 1913.

"The plan applies uniformly to all people at all levels in the Bell System, including those who are not represented by the unions as well as those who are," the AT&T statement declared.

Without direct reference to the union charge that AT&T had forced all the subsidiaries to act together in raising the pensions, the AT&T statement insisted that the revision was agreed to by the companies through consultation, but with each company making its own decision.

The AT&T statement pointed out that all the Bell companies have the same plan in effect, thereby permitting employes to continue to enjoy the benefits of the pension program even while transferring from one Bell unit to another.

According to CWA, some 21,000 former Bell System employes are now getting pensions, averaging about $75 a month. CWA estimates that 40 percent of the pensioners will benefit by the recent changes, bringing the average pension up $10 to $15 a month. The union says that the company's new $100-a-month pensions deducts Social Security benefits earned by the employes.

President Beirne told newsmen yesterday:

"Our charges have been filed so as to settle the fundamental issue of whether labor-management relations are to be settled through orderly collective bargaining or are to be at the caprice of an employer.

"If the company has the right to improve pension provisions unilaterally, it also has the right to decrease those provisions."

Beirne said the union could have sought a court injunction to block the pension move by the company, but the union refrained from so doing, he said, because "we're not trying to deny the workers the slight improvement contained in these company-made changes."

Fight Brews as Cuba Seeks New Broadcasting Channels

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A Capitol Hill attack on the State Department is slated to erupt in the next session of Congress if this country agrees to Cuban demands for new broadcasting channels at the current Montreal conference.

Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) has warned the State Department that agreement to the Cuban proposals will bring to preventing ratification of the a Senate investigation with a view proposed treaty.

The conference of the North American Regional Broadcasting agreement is being held in Montreal to see if a new treaty with Cuba on control of radio channels can be reached. Last Thursday the NARBA voted, 6 to 4, to reject Cuban proposals.

Frequent Parleys Since

State Department officials and FCC commissioners here are ruconferences since to see if any agreement can be effected. Chairman of the NARBA is FCC Commissioner Rose H. Hyde, delegation chairman.

Although the majority of the FCC Comissioners here are rumored to be in favor of Hyde's apparent position that any treaty is better than none, the State Department seems to be becoming cool in view of the certainty of powerful Capitol Hill opposition.

Cuba is demanding rights on three additional US 1-A clear channels and power increases on three others. Establishment of Cuban Class 1 stations on 11 channels (7 regionals and 4 clears; a total of 108 assignments on some 79 channels to serve an island of approximately five million population; increased protection on many channels with Cuban power boosts openly threatened against two stations unless they reduce radiation toward Cuba; a ban on further licensing on at least five difference cycles throughout Florida and in southern Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Decision Expected This Week

Under the treaty, NBC would stand to have its WNBC New York clear channel broken down. CBS faces the same prospect for WBBM Chicago, and WBT and WFBC would also be victims.

A final decision by the State Department, in consultation with FCC, is expected this week. FCC Chairman Wayne Coy was in consultation Monday with Undersecretary of State James E. Webb.

Lucas made his opposition to the treaty clear in telegrams to Hyde, Secretary of State Dean Acheson and FCC Chairman Coy.

Lucas said the proposals were so damaging to stations in the Middle West, including Illinois, that they should not be considered.

He said that if the United States delegation accepted the proposals in an agreement, "I will, as Senate majority leader, call for an investigation with the purpose of preventing ratification."

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

JOAN TERRY tapping start at the Casino Royal for the last two weeks, is going to New York today for a chance at the big time. Leon and Eddie's is the "showcase," as she calls it, and the excitement arises because of the agents and talent scouts who frequent it.

Joan, at the age of 20, is a veteran of television, theaters and night clubs, but she isn't satisfied—and recalls that most performers at Leon and Eddie's go from there to musical comedies and movies. This, she thinks, is the perfect end of a year (her first year on the road) in which she's had a lot of breaks.

She's a slim, friendly blonde, who specializes in ballet tap. She does a fast rhythm tap in pirouettes. Her mother put her in dancing class, she says, "as mothers do, just to groom me." Her mother started something that was going to take her all over the country, for she travels with her daughter on all her engagements.

RECOMMENDED meal at Rocco's:

First course, Spiedini Di Mozzarella Alla Romano. Done in the Roman manner, of course, it's an oblong cake-like concoction made of Mozzarella cheese and squares of bread. They dip it in batter, fry till crisp, and top with anchovies. Served with a wonderful sauce of butter, anchovies and lemon.

Next—Veal Scaloppini in Bianco. No tomatoes, no spaghetti, but still it's a real Italian dish. Thin slices of veal, Proscuitto (Italian ham) and mushrooms are served on toast in a sauce of lemon, butter and white wine.

For dessert, an Italian cheese cake, made of goat cheese.

Argo Lodge Meets Tonight

Max Freedman, Washington correspondent for the Winnipeg (Manitoba) Free Press, will address a Pearl Harbor Day meeting of Argo Lodge B'nai B'rith, tonight at 8 o'clock at the Jewish Community Center.

To Present Plays

The one-act comedies will be presented by the Montgomery Junior College Dramatic Club in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School auditorium tonight at 9:15.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—When the One World Committee went to Yugoslavia recently, and met with Tito, Ira Hirschmann mentioned the matter of future American investments there. He suggested that Americans might be reluctant to invest in Yugoslavia for two reasons, (1) the fear that Russia might wage war against its former satellite, and (2) it would take Yugoslavia a long time to make repayments . . . "If you're going to get anywhere in this world," Tito replied, "you have to learn to take chances."

Ezio Pinza, who has an apartment in a Park ave. hotel, received word from the desk clerk that a policeman was downstairs and about to issue a ticket because Pinza's car was double-parked. Pinza went downstairs, and saw the policeman writing the ticket . . . The cop looked at him and asked: "You're Mr. Pinza, aren't you?" The singer nodded . . . The cop put away his summons book and said: "I'm not going to give you a ticket. You're going to give me one. My daughter is a fan of yours." And so Ezio Pinza stood beside his double-parked car on the street, asking a traffic cop questions about his name, daughter's name, address, etc., and writing the information on paper which he signed.

Good Marks Aren't Everything

How easy it is to think of school only in terms of grades! Naturally it is important for our youngsters to do good schoolwork. They need to learn to read, write and figure. But a lot of other important things can happen at school, too.

We're realizing more and more clearly how important it is for people to know how to get along with one another, for instance. And school is one of the best places in which to build the skills of social adjustment.

Many a child gets good grades partly because he doesn't get along with other children. That sounds strange, doesn't it? Yet it often happens that the youngster who isn't accepted by his playmates because he is smaller than they, doesn't play games as well or acts differently than the average child, turns to schoolwork because he's left out in the cold by the other kids.

All of us need approval. If we can't get it in one way, we try other methods. For the school child, getting good grades brings approval from teachers and parents.

Yet, being approved of and accepted by his playmates is really more important. If parent or teacher begins to see that a youngster is working unusually hard at his studies because he isn't accepted socially, it will pay to find ways to help him be a part of his group rather than blindly to be too happy about the fine schoolwork he is doing.

Marine Kissed Slayer's Wife, Robertson Trial Witness Says

Mrs. Lizzie Lucille Robertson was carried into her home and kissed by Marine Pfc. Everett L. Flagg at 4 a. m. about a week before they were shot by Mrs. Robertson's estranged husband, a witness testified yesterday.

The husband, Clarence W. Robertson, 34, is on trial in District Court charged with second-degree murder of his wife and deadly assault last March 20. The defense opened its case in the afternoon.

Chief defense witness was Mrs. Emma Huff, now of Floyd, Va., and formerly of 1123 11th st. nw. She was Robertson's landlady and a friend of the wife, who lived at 1125 11th st. nw., she said.

She testified that a week or so before the shooting, "I saw Lucille with Mr. Flagg. They woke me up. This young man had Lucille in his arms. As they walked along from the car, he'd kiss her and she'd laugh."

When Mrs. Huff sought to admonish her about this later, Mrs. Robertson replied that "she wanted to aggravate him (Robertson) until he committed suicide," according to Mrs. Huff.

Meanwhile, despite objection of Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin, Judge James R. Kirkland admitted into evidence the statement Robertson gave police after his arrest.

In it, Robertson said he believed his wife was living in intimacy with Flagg. Robertson also said he wanted to frighten his wife and Flagg but not to shoot them.

Maybe Jimmy Ought to Try 'Mule Train'

It's hard to believe, but a group of young ladies have expressed the hope that WMAL's handsome Jimmy Gibbons will quit serenading them.

The girls are students at the Washington School for Secretaries, in the National Press Building. Jimmy's "Country Store" is pitched on the sidewalk of F st., beneath their windows.

There's nothing personal in the complaint; it's just that when Jimmy's loudspeaker gives out with "White Christmas," it wrecks the gals' attempts to learn rhythmic typing.

HELP—BUT DON'T JOIN

A new club has been formed in Washington, and I sincerely hope you'll never be eligible to join.

It is a club for adults (over 18) who suffer from cerebral palsy, or spastic paralysis. An injury to that portion of the brain which controls muscular action leaves "C. P." victims easily identifiable by their unsteady gait and speech difficulties. But intelligence and perception are rarely affected.

Two of the five founders of the club hold college degrees; two others are employed in the Government.

Through speakers, movies and discussion groups, the club hopes to help in the physical and psychological development of its members. Since social contacts are a major problem for victims of C.P., parties and entertainment will form a big part of the club's activity.

Tonight's inaugural meeting will be held at 8 o'clock in the library of St. John's Episcopal Church, 821 16th st. nw. But getting the members to and from the meeting will require some help.

Any individual or service organization which can furnish the necessary transportation is asked to call Janet Tulloch, 3800 Florence dr., Alexandria, Va. Her phone number is King 8-8973.

C. P. victims who have not yet joined the group are also invited to call.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Friendly, playful cat and kitten." (Lockwood 5-0031 between 5 and 9 p. m.)

"Four cute kittens, 10 weeks old; one male, three females." (Woodley 7484.)

"Four puppies born Armistice Day; will hold until Christmas if desired." (Jackson 2-0039 after 5:30 p. m.)

"Eight puppies, 8 weeks old; fine dogs with excellent dispositions." (Overlook 2328.)

"Back issues of such British publications as 'The Motor,' 'The Aeroplane,' 'Plastics,' 'Light Metals,' and 'The Overseas Engineer.'" (Decatur 2414 during business hours, and ask for R. G. K. Anson.)

CRITIC

Kathryn H. Harris of 1879 Alabama ave. se. notes that relatively few cab drivers showed up to register their traffic complaints at Mr. Keneipp's gripe session. She adds:

"But if the public had been invited to speak out on the subject of violations by cab drivers, the Armory probably wouldn't have been big enough to accommodate the crowds."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

There has been much discussion recently of our traffic problems, and the lack of parking space for all-day parkers.

During the war years, car pools were utilized to excellent advantage to conserve gasoline and tires. Why can't car pools be revived, with Government agencies assigning parking places only to those who cooperate?

Mrs. Jeanne Kerdash

Dear Mrs. Kerdash:

Sounds like a very sensible suggestion. But my guess is that a mere traffic crisis will not stir us into the same kind of cooperative action that the war years brought.

At any rate—it's worth a try. Is any District official interested in the suggestion? Bill

NO PROGRESS REPORT

Arthur Clarendon Smith greets Margaret Truman's singing success with mixed emotions.

About a year ago when I interviewed Arthur on WTOP, he said he'd served as matchmaker for 108 couples, and by gum he was going to get Margaret married off as Number 109. But now he grumbles:

"This doggone singing career is distracting Miss Margaret. The better the reviews she gets, the longer it's going to take me."

Lewis Gives Dawson Brush-Off

By Drew Pearson

Two men with bristling eyebrows glowered, snorted and shouted at each other last week when the miners' welfare fund trustees met behind closed doors. They were John L. Lewis and Charles Dawson, former Federal judge of Louisville, Ky., representing the operators.

Pearson

In the middle sat Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, neutral trustee.

Calling the meeting to order, Lewis announced: "The people present today are trustee Bridges, trustee Lewis and interloper Dawson."

Then Dawson tried to present his credentials, and Bridges moved to accept them. But Lewis rapped the table and called the roll. He spat out a surly "No"; Bridges voted "Yes."

Dawson also clamored to vote, but Lewis cut him off.

This same routine was repeated over every question that came up. Each time Dawson demanded to vote, and each time Lewis refused to recognize him.

Lewis called him a "rank outsider," present only by "sufferance." Dawson shouted back his right to be heard. Finally the meeting adjourned. Nothing was accomplished, except that the two bushy-browed trustees were still sputtering at each other.

Illegal Air Treaties

It was buried in the financial sections of the big city newspapers, but one of the most important court decisions affecting the treaty-making power of the State Department was handed down last week. As a result, our relations with Canada are in a dither.

United States Judges Jim Proctor and Alan Goldsborough were the two judges who had the courage to challenge the right of the State Department to negotiate executive agreements with another country without ratification by the Senate.

To date, the State Department has negotiated 38 air treaties without paying any attention to the Constitution of the United States, which requires treaties with foreign countries to be ratified by a two-thirds Senate vote.

Now, for the first time, the courts have called a stop. While the court decree did not actually pass on the merits of the issue, and actually passed the question on to the Supreme Court, nevertheless Canada is already up in arms.

What brought the issue to a climax was when Colonial Air Lines, a small company with a phenomenal 19-year record without a fatality, got tired of being kicked around.

The State Department had given Canada a route parallel to Colonial's, from Montreal to New York, while simultaneously denying Colonial the right to fly to Washington.

So Colonial challenged the State Department's power to negotiate a treaty without Senate ratification. In retaliation, Canada is now so irate that it has served Colonial with notice to show cause why it should not be closed down on the Montreal route after December 12.

What the issue partly boils down to is that the big air lines are able to hire top Cabinet-level lobbyists to protect their interests when State Department executive agreements are being written.

American Airlines, for instance, retains as its attorney the son-in-law of Secretary of State Acheson; while Pan American long retained Louis Johnson, now Secretary of National Defense. The little companies, able to afford no such lobbying luxury, have to fall back on the Constitution of the United States.

'Sockless' Jim Folsom

It has never been told before how "Kissin' Jim"—Alabama's fabulous Gov. James E. Folsom—almost became known as "Sockless Jim."

The trouble was that Jim's feet were so big he couldn't find a pair of socks to fit. He solved the problem simply by going without socks and wearing his Charlie Chaplin brogans over well-scrubbed but naked feet.

This went against the grain with R. B. Chandler, publisher of the Mobile Press-Register, who suspected that the eyes of the Nation would be cast on the Governor's big, undraped feet.

So, with the dignity of Alabama at stake, Chandler dictated a formal letter to the Governor just before his inauguration. Chandler observed, in effect, that he didn't mind Big Jim sticking his foot in his mouth occasionally as long as he didn't stick both feet in the public eye. He pointed out that the Governor's feet—sans socks—would be exposed to news cameras at the inauguration and might make bigger news than the ceremony itself. Finally, to save the State from embarrassment, Chandler offered to scare up some socks.

Big Jim cheerfully accepted the offer, and Chandler sent out a frantic plea to the cotton mills. He warned that a "sockless Governor" in the heart of the cotton belt would be bad publicity for the industry, might even start a fad among the younger generation, which would imitate the Governor and also go without socks.

A cotton mill in northern Alabama immediately responded. It made up a batch of oversized socks that would fit the Governor of Alabama, and Big Jim wears them to this day.
